U.S. sinks 3 Cambodian navy craft

By The Associated Press

U.S. Air Forces planes sank three Cambodian navy patrol craft and crippled four others to prevent attempts to take crewmen of the captive U.S. merchant Mayaguez to the Cambodian mainland, the Pentagon announced today in Washington.

Pentagon reports said an AC130 gunship and A7 attack aircraft keeping watch over the ship struck the Cambodian ships with 20mm gunfire and possibly other weapons. The spokesman said U.S. aircraft had been receiving small-arms fire from the Cambodian boats for several hours before the planes struck at 8:30 p.m. EDT Tuesday.

U.S. Air Force rescue helicopters tried to pick up some of the crewmen of the destroyed Cambodian boats, but other Cambodian naval craft fired on the helicopters, the sources said. Nothing is known of the fate of the 39 persons in the Mayaguez crew.

It was also learned that U.S. warplanes flying out of Thailand have been ordered to prevent any effort by the Cambodians to move the Mayaguez from its present position near Koh Tang island about 30 miles off the Cambodian coast.

The island is about 200 miles from Utapao Air Base on the south coast of Thailand, to which the United States flew 1,100 Marines to back up President Ford's demand for release of the ship. Thai Premier Kukrit Pramoj charged that the dispatch of the Marines, done without his permission, violated Thailand's sovereignty and has demanded that they be removed by Thursday morning.

Kukrit told newsmen in Bangkok he would take "drastic action" if the United States did not withdraw the Marines from the territory of its only remaining ally on the Southeast Asian mainland.

In Laos, where the Communist Pathet Lao recently gained control of the coalition government, mobs of students ransacked American AID compounds in two cities, looting rice and supplies. They were apparently protesting high prices, 70 per cent inflation and the U.S. presence.

Radio contact was lost with the U.S. Agency for International Development installation at Savannakhet on the Mekong River, and a U.S. Embassy spokesman expressed concern for the 15 Americans there. In Luang Prabang, 200 miles north of Vientiane, 3,000 persons reportedly seized rice supplies and wrecked the AID compound, but the embassy said the four Americans were thought to be safe.

In an ultimatum delivered to U.S. Charge d'Affaires Edward E. Masters, Kukrit said his country does not intend to be drafted into U.S. preparations to take back the merchant ship Mayaguez by force.

Meanwhile, 40 or 50 student protesters yelling, "American go home," and carrying signs such as "Bastard Ford, get your troops out," were at the airport for the arrival of the new U.S. ambassador to Thailand, Charles S. Whitehouse.

Whitehouse walked nodding and smiling between the ranks of the students and issued a prepared statement saying he hopes to further "friendship and cooperation between our two peoples in the months

PORTAGEVILLE — James Bowman, about 55, is in New Madrid County jail, suspected of shooting Elizabeth Lockridge about midnight Tuesday with a sawed-off 12-gauge shotgun, according to a sheriff's deputy who said the shooting occurred on a road east of Bay Ditch.

The deputy said cause of the shooting has not been determined and Bowman has voluntarily surrendered to city police.

The woman was taken to Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti in critical condition with wounds in the neck and shoulder. She was transferred today to Missouri Deta Community Hospital in Sikeston, where her condition is reported to be in serious condition.

2 jailed

CHARLESTON — Two rural East Prairie men are being held in Mississippi County Jail on charges of burglary and stealing in connection with a break-in Tuesday afternoon at the Sam Denson home, approximately eight miles east of East Prairie, and the theft of $140 and a man's wrist watch.

Billy and Jerome Weems, who live approximately a half mile from the Denson home, were arrested about 5:45 p.m Tuesday by Deputy Sheriffs Norris Grissom and Robert Smith after the two were tracked through a wheat field near their home.

Bond for the two men, who will appear Thursday in Magistrate Court, had not been set this morning.

Grant approved for Benton park

BENTON — A $30,000 grant to the city for development of a park has been approved by the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation of the Department of the Interior, according to announcement from 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison's Washington office.

Burlison said the grant is to be matched equally by local funds for acquisition of 5.5 acres in the southeastern part of town, where the city will develop a restroom-storage building, lights, fence, bleachers, ball field and tennis court.

The land has been donated by the Chamber of Commerce.

Burlison said the grant was made available through the Land and Water Conservation Fund, which provides money to assist state and local governments in acquiring and developing non-federal recreation land and waters. All federal money granted must be matched by an equal amount of state and local money.

Land and Conservation Fund revenues are derived from the Treasury and from Outer Continental Shelf mineral receipts,from the sale of federal surplus real property and from the federal motorboat fuels tax, Burlison said.

Charleston adopts budget

CHARLESTON — The City Council Tuesday night approved the 1975-76 budget and retained the present city tax rate of $1.50 per $100 assessed valuation.

In the budget, submitted by City Manager Willis Downs, estimated revenue for the coming year totaled $575,579, and as of May 1, the city had an estimated cash balance of $225,000. Proposed operating expenses for 1975-76 were set at $563,513.25, an increase of $53,866.60 over the operating expenses of $509,646.65 during 1974-75. The council, with the exception of Councilman Wyman Beasley, voted to adopt the budget.

An ordinance regulating signs in the downtown urban renewal project, scheduled to begin this summer, was adopted. Under the ordinance, signs, which will be affixed to a shingle-shake type canopy extending from north of Cypress Street to south of Court Street, must be one foot wide by five feet long and be of a back-ground color matching the canopy. The style of lettering is optional. However, all letters must be six inches in height and black in color. Bordering around the signs must also be black.

The ordinance, which will be effective June 1, prohibits signs above the canopy but will not affect window lettering under the canopy. Lettering on second floor windows will also be permited. Existing signs not in compliance with the ordinance must be taken down.

Also adopted were resolutions needed to qualify the city for flood insurance.

A public hearing will be held in conjunction with the May council meeting for the purpose

Thieves take bike, jewelry, calculator

A calculator, bicycle, and tennis racket and jewelry were reported stolen in separate thefts, police said today.

The calculator was taken from a briefcase owned by Eugene Dowling, 632 Tanner St., sometime between April 29 and Tuesday.

The brief case was on Dowling's desk in the electronics shop of Sikeston High School, police said.

Marie Nunnelee, 215 Kramer, told police that someone took a bicycle from the garage and a tennis racket from a van truck parked at the house. The thefts occurred between May 3 and Saturday.

The bike was valued at $92.65 and the racket at $43.25.

Betty Cochran, 349 School, Apt. D., told police that someone entered her apartment May 6 or 7 and took $100 in jewelry from the dresser in her bedroom. Taken were a diamond ring and a ring and earring set.

The apartment was apparently unlocked at the time of the theft, police said.

Mayors to invite Wallace

SCOTT CITY — The Scott County Mayors Association decided Tuesay night to invite Dr. John Wallace of Jefferson City, who oversees the licensing of ambulance services in the state, to attend an association meeting and discuss ambulance districts.

There has been some confusion surrounding ambulance service in the North Scott County area. Citizens in the Illmo-Scott City area would like to have an ambulance stationed in one of the two cities, and the County Court has come out in favor of the idea, but it is uncertain whether such an ambulance can be licensed.

The mayors have heard conflicting statements, so Wallace was asked to speak in an attempt to clear up some of the confusion.

Louie Hirschowitz, presiding judge of the Scott County Court, has pointed out that if county citizens vote to form a countywide ambulance district, a board of directors will determine where ambulances will be stationed. The directors will be elected by the citizens of the county.

He said Tuesday night, however, that the issue seemed to be dying. Few persons have signed petitions calling for an election to vote on the question of forming an ambulance district, and little interest seems to have been generated, Hirshowitz said.

Oran Mayor Kenneth Ransdell suggested that perhaps the reason for the lack of interest is that the County Court is now picking up the tab for the service.

"Sometimes the hardest thing is to get the people's attention," he said.

Hirschowitz pointed out that the court has already provided two ambulances, insurance and salaries for service in the north end of the county and has helped subsidize ambulance service in the south end. He had asked area towns to help pay for the service.

Illmo has already sent a check to the court, and Commerce Mayor Ann Huck said her city had sent a check.

Scott City Mayor Jim Cauble, however, reported that the City Council in his city felt that since no ambulances are stationed in the extreme northern part of the county and they have no say in the operation of the service, the council is not interested in contributing any money.

During the course of the generally informal meeting, the mayors also discussed dog control. Cauble and Illmo Mayor Raymond Eifert reported that their two cities share the services of the same dog catcher, who seems to be doing a good job.

Eifert said Illmo is cracking down on violators of the citys leash law, as is Scott City. Eifert said not many people have been prosecuted yet, but Cauble said 82 dogs have been picked up in Scott City within the last two months.

Court costs of $8.50 and a fine of $5 is assessed for each violation, he said.

Eifert said Illmo has had a leash law for three or four years, but had not been able to find a good dog catcher. He said one of the dog catchers captured only beagles and then sold them after he collected his fee from the city.

Joint meeting scheduled

The Sikeston area Chamber of Commerce, Sikeston Industrial Development Corporation directors and the City Council will meet at noon Thursday at Ramada Inn.

The three organizations will hear a report from the Industrial Site Selection and Finance Committee.

Legislative pay hike bill goes to governor

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A $4,000 annual pay raise for Missouri's 197 legislators awaits a decision by Gov. Christopher S. Bond after being hustled through the state Senate on a rare discharge petition procedure.

Bond hasn't commented yet on the bill, but has said in the past he would not oppose a legislative pay boost if it were coupled with other legislative reforms.

As the third bill to reach the governor's desk this session, the $889,000 measure would hike lawmakers' salaries from $8,400 to $12,400 a year.

Despite warnings that the hike would cause repercussions and possibly a referendum to roll back the boost, the Senate Tuesday passed the measure 18-16. Both houses passed the hike with the minimum number of votes needed.

Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R-Brentwood, called the pay hike a "self-serving piece of legislation." He reminded members that they were "public servants. That means sacrifice."

But proponents called on lawmakers to ignore "editorial writers" whomight criticize them.

Democratic Floor Leader Lawrence Lee of St. Louis called on legislators to make themselves "first class legislators" and lift themselves up from "starvation wages."

The petition signed by one-third of the Senate was the first time such a procedure had been used in years. It came after the Senate Budget Control Committee rejected the pay boost 4-3.

Signed by 12 senators, the petition takes a bill away from a committee and brings it to the floor for consideration.

Sen. Jones said lawmakers would be "shocked with horror" if the rule was used for any other bill.

But Cape Girardeau Democrat Albert Spradling said the committee system "has fallen down on the legislature." He criticized committees for being manipulated by "special interests" and allowing too many bills to come to the floor.

An amendment to reduce the pay boost to $10,500 a year lost on a voice vote. The $10,500 salary was proposed by a citizens' panel that made a study of the legislature.

Sen. William Waters, D-Liberty, the amendment's sponsor, said "a 47 per cent increase is too much."

"We should respect the feelings of the public and at least consider them," he said.

Waters expressed fear that the legislature would become fulltime lawmakers with the pay raise. With outside jobs, lawmakers have a "better insight" on what the people need, he said.

Jones warned against the legislature becoming like the fulltime Congress, which he said people would rather see "pack up and go home."

But Lee said the lawmakers have already become full-time legislators with the annual sessions.

The $8,400 salary would mean "starvation for a legislator with a family," the St. Louis Democrat added.

"What you're going to have in the legislature is a bunch of lawyers. And I don't even want that," said Lee, who is a lawyer.

Without the pay hike, working people such as truck drivers, laborers and electricians would be driven out of the legislature, he said.

Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R-Brentwood, called the pay hike a "self-serving piece of legislation." He reminded members that they were "public servants. That means sacrifice."

But proponents called on lawmakers to ignore "editorial writers" whomight criticize them.

Democratic Floor Leader Lawrence Lee of St. Louis called on legislators to make themselves "first class legislators" and lift themselves up from "starvation wages."

The petition signed by one-third of the Senate was the first time such a procedure had been used in years. It came after the Senate Budget Control Committee rejected the pay boost 4-3.

Signed by 12 senators, the petition takes a bill away from a committee and brings it to the floor for consideration.

Sen. Jones said lawmakers would be "shocked with horror" if the rule was used for any other bill.

But Cape Girardeau Democrat Albert Spradling said the committee system "has fallen down on the legislature." He criticized committees for being manipulated by "special interests" and allowing too many bills to come to the floor.

An amendment to reduce the pay boost to $10,500 a year lost on a voice vote. The $10,500 salary was proposed by a citizens' panel that made a study of the legislature.

Sen. William Waters, D-Liberty, the amendment's sponsor, said "a 47 per cent increase is too much."

"We should respect the feelings of the public and at least consider them," he said.

Waters expressed fear that the legislature would become fulltime lawmakers with the pay raise. With outside jobs, lawmakers have a "better insight" on what the people need, he said.

Jones warned against the legislature becoming like the fulltime Congress, which he said people would rather see "pack up and go home."

But Lee said the lawmakers have already become full-time legislators with the annual sessions.

The $8,400 salary would mean "starvation for a legislator with a family," the St. Louis Democrat added.

"What you're going to have in the legislature is a bunch of lawyers. And I don't even want that," said Lee, who is a lawyer.

Without the pay hike, working people such as truck drivers, laborers and electricians would be driven out of the legislature, he said.

A QUESTION OF QUESTIONS

.. Times have changed, and company employment offices had best be aware of it. A management bulletin put out by the Water Quality Assn. contains a number of tips to enable personnel interviewers to avoid difficulties with the Equal Economic Opportunity Commission:

— Ask no questions about the job applicant's national origin. Restrict questions about membership in organizations to those dealing with professional societies or other work-related groups — and only when it is relevant to the job.

— Don't ask for the name of nearest kin. Instead, ask whom the applicant wishes notified in an emergency.

— Don't ask for a recommendation from the applicant's last employer. Ask for persons who will supply references.

— Restrict questions about the applicant's military career to work-related experience or training. Arrests are not convictions, so don't ask about them. It's even risky to ask about convictions, unless the applicant would be handling money or other valuables.

— Restrict any employment tests specifically to job requirements. Anything else may be discriminatory.

— Questions about height can be discriminatory (particularly against Hispanic Americans). Questions about weight can be asked only when it is relevant to the job and the standards are applied uniformly.

— Questions about car or home ownership, as measures of affluence, can be considered unfair to some minorities. Exception: It's safe to ask a salesman if he has a car.

— Don't ask single women if they are engaged.

Some of these restrictions seem eminently right and reasonable, others maybe a little less so. In any case, one is tempted to suggest an additional caution: Whatever questions you ask — smile.

MORE TURNED OUT TO BE LESS

"Sighted SUB, sank same" sums up the current recession as far as the nation's auto workers are concerned.

"Special unemployment benefit (SUB) funds at Chrysler and General Motors are expected to run dry this spring," ran the story the other day, "leaving more than 130,000 laid-off auto workers in bleak financial straits."

Clarification: Leaving them in the same financial straits as hundreds of thousands of laid-off nonauto workers who did not enjoy a year of SUB. That is, dependent upon state unemployment benefits alone.

It was nice while it lasted, and everyone admits that SUB was was never intended tocope with recession-depth cutbacks in auto production but rather to tide workers over temporary layoffs, such as at model-changing time.

And tide them over it did in grand style — at up 95 per cent of regular take-home pay, when state assistance was added.

It was hailed as a great victory for United Auto Workers bargainers when SUB was won from the industry a few years ago. Does any auto worker now maybe wish that the victory had been a little less complete — that perhaps SUB had been established at, say, 75 per cent of regular pay, or even as low as 50 per cent?

Half pay is better than no pay at all, and if SUB payments had been half the rate they were in 1974 there would now still be enough in the fund to last into 1976.

The auto workers didn't kill the goose that laid the golden egg. They just wore it out before its time.

BRANCHING OUT
Corps' new proposals ridiculous

If you are planning to dig a hole in your back yard to build a swimming pool, you'd better get at it within the next month. If you don't, you might run afoul of the Army Corps of Engineers.

The same thing applies if you're planning to excavate for a basement. Or, if you are a greenskeeper at a golf course, you have in mind adding to the frustration of golfers by building a new sand trap. In all such cases, there is a possibility that you may have to get a permit from the corps of engineers before you turn a shovelful of dirt.

All this stems from a recent decision by a federal court giving the engineers jurisdiction over dumping or dredging on "waters of the United States." The phrase formerly was "navigable" waters.. But the new ruling would greatly expand the corps' authority to include every lake, stream, stock pond, irrigation ditch and marsh in the nation.

The court ordered the engineers to come up with a definition of "waters of the United States." The engineers have proposed four, and it is the first of these four which could be interpreted to cover such odd areas as golf courses, swimming pools and basements. The key factor here, said a spokesman for the corps, is whether the area has ever been flooded by a navigable stream. If so, it lies on the flood plain and comes under corps jurisdiction.

Of much greater importance than the three examples we have cited is the fact that the regulations would require a farmer who wanted to plow a fertile piece of bottom land adjacent to a levee, or dredge an irrigtion ditch, or even enlarge a stock pond to get a federal permit to do so.

The Environmental Protection Agency, which would have the power to revoke any such permit issued by the engineers, favors the first and most sweeping of these proposals. The other three cover less territory, but all of them would greatly expand the engineers's authority.

We consider all four of them utterly ridiculous and we are confident we are far from being alone in opposing the adoption of any of them.

Already, we can hear the uproarious protests emanating from farmers — completely justified protests, we think — at having to go through all the endless red tape of getting a permit from the engineers before making a stock pond larger or dredging a half-filled-in irrigation ditch. It is their land, and it is none of the engineers', or the EPA's, business what they do with it.

The engineers have set June 6 as the deadline for comments on the proposals. We predict they'll get plenty of comments, all of them caustic.

CROP UNCERTAINTIES ARE RISING FROM THE FARM VETO

President Ford's veto of the emergency Farm Bill comes at a critical time in the agricultural production schedule of American farmers for 1975 crops of feed grains, soybeans and other foodstuffs. Those products are needed vitally by American consumers and world trading partners of the United States.

In vetoing the measure, the President followed the advice of Erl L. Butz, Agriculture secretary, who guessed thatthe provisions of the measure might cost the Treasury $1.8 billion. However, the President disregarded the urging of many influential representatives and senators within his own party, including the majority of the Kansas delegation, and many farm state Democrats and Republicans. It was, in short, a split decision, but probably one that will not be reversed by Congress.

The bill would have raised target prices, or guarantees, and loan supports for U.S. grain producers, who now are apparently at the mercy of a market marked in recent months by irrational price fluctuations., mostly on the down side. Whether farmers respond in anger by reducing spring plantings is a question that moves to the forefront. The consequences of that action on a widespread scale would be enormous, both at home and to our foreign markets.

The argument for increasing target prices and support levels was simple: If those provisions were valid when current farm legislation was passed several years ago — and apparently they were because they were included in the legislation wholeheartedly endorsed by Butz— then increases were in order now to take into account rapidly escalating costs of fuel, fertilizer, seed, labor an other farm production costs.

In the compromise version of legislation sent to the President's desk last week, target and loan prices were not out of line. They probably would have cost the Treasury, hence the taxpayers, nothing at all in food grain production cotton being the villain in the script offered by Butz. Many in agriculture fear that any lower level will be so far below the actual costs of food production that liquidation of many commercial family farms may now become a real prospect as it is currently in family farms producing beef cattle.

Additionally, farm grain prices have been declining at an alarming rate over the last several months. The administration's only attempt at a solution so far has been in trying to beef up farm exports under provisions of Public Law No. 480 to keep supplies from becoming burdensome. Some radical farm spokesmen have recommended that a better solution now would be "keeping tractors in the shed and bredding bulls penned up this year."

Butz also had contended that increasing supports would have created incentives for farmers to overproduce. Yet he and the administration have called for full production this year. It appears the Ford administration is bent on having it both ways: High production and undertain farm prices. But that, it is clear, is politics.

We hop time proves us wrong, but it now appears that grain and livestock, risky enterprises at best, are facing more hazards than ever because of the President's action.

DILEMNA IN FARM BILL

A veto of the farm bill would severely impair President Ford's election prospects across the nation's agricultural midsection, in the opinion of most rural politicians.

Mary Louise Smith, Republican national chairman, who is from Iowa, said the logic behind any veto decision would have to be explained in extraordinary lucid terms.

An earlier G.O.P. chairman, Sen. Bob Dole (R-Kan.) along with Sen. Milton R. Young (R-N.D.) pleaded with the President to accept the proposed rise in the minimum price guarantees and commodity loan provisions for this year's crops.

The compromise worked out by a conference committee already has cleared the Senate. The House is expected to approve it tomorrow by something less than the two-thirds that would be necessary later to override a veto. Ford hasn't said what he will do.

Earl L. Butz, agriculture secretary, is deadset against the bill, not because of its impact on consumer prices, but because he says a return to large scale government payments to farmers would have to be followed once again by undesirable production quotas and controls.

In days gone by, the congressional farm bloc could push through protective tariffs, rural electrification projects, soil conservation programs, and a complicated hybrid policy combining price supports, marketing controls, and surplus storage. But the numerical balance in Congress has swung to the metropolitan areas. Farm legislation must be tailored to the specifications of price conscious consumers.

Generally, the support levels in the pending bill are below current prices. Except for cotton and dairy products, food prices would not go up as a result of the provisions in the bill-unless, that is, farm prices for wheat, corn and other feed grains took a nose dive.

The presidential election implications of the farm bill issue seem clear. The Democratic vote in once solidly Republican farm states-the Dakotas and Iowa, for instance-has been increasing in recent elections. Farmers who aren't satisfied with what they see in their bank books are more inclined to vote Democratic.

BIGGEST COVER-UP

A farm industry spokesman has charged that the worst cover-up operation in Washington is not Watergate, but the untiring efforts of the Administration and the Congress to cover up with controls the inflation caused by irresponsible government spending policies.

In the words of the spokesman, "Without denying the political significance of the Watergate investigation, we must conclude that the effort to 'cover-up' inflation by means of economic controls is in most respects a far greater threat to the future well-being of this nation...." He added that only a few political appointees are involved in Watergate. Controls, on the other hand, "tempt citizens in every community across the land to hoard supplies, rustle cattle, keep two sets of books, pass money under the counter for special favors--and even cheat in such matters as the amount of fat left untrimmed on meat in grocery stores. Any government program which invites mass cheating is certain to be a corrupting influence....What is needed...is responsible government...."

XXX

Specific examples of ill-advised reform legislation are to be found among pension reform proposals pending in Congress. There is no question that employees must be protected in their pension rights. But any reform legislation that is passed must take into consideration the unique characteristics of particular industries.

For example, in retail stores payroll costs are a major part of total expense, taking about half of the margin, or difference, between the cost of the merchandise and the retail selling price. If employees were to gain vested or irrevocable pension rights after terms of employment that were too short, the cost to most retailers, who experience a high employee turnover, would be prohibitively high. Industry authorities suggest that minimum time of employment to become eligible for coverage in a retirement plan should be three years in order to avoid the expense of record keeping and reporting on a large group of employees who work only a short while and do not even acquire rights to retirement benefits. Any pension reform legislation should provide reasonable time for employers to build up adequate reserves to fund company pension programs. If the period of time allowed is too short, costs could be so great as to result in the curtailment or elimination of present plans and the abandonment of efforts to establish new ones -- particularly in retailing where employment costs are such a large factor. It is most important that any federal legislation that is enacted preempt state laws which set up standards for pension plans. Many businesses operate in several states, and it would be impossible to make any one pension plan conform to the varying requirements of different state legislation.

Consumers, retailers and employees alike have a great stake in letting their legislators know of their concern that pension reform legislation, if it is to be the law of the land, should be reasonable and workable and not weaken present retirement programs.

Chuck Colson's Back: And Jimmy Hoffa's Before A Grand Jury Again

WASHINGTON — Apparently Watergate still is a growth industry -- what with Charles (Chuck) Colson now religiously writing his own memoirs for a change. Few were as close to Dick Nixon as Chuck. But, to steal a phrase from Jrrry Ford, that war is over and it's doubtful Colson would trample his grandmother, as he once said he would, for anybody.

But Chuck could do this nation a favor by disclosing the inside story of ex-teamsters iron man, bantam 62-year-old Jimmy Hoffa who now claims that Mr. Nixon threw him out of prison and on Chuck Colson's advice banned him from the labor movement until 1980.

Chunky Jimmy, who once had enough power in this land to neutralize an energy shortage, still hopes to recapture the Teamsters Brotherhood which is the mainspring of American industrialism. But his dreams must be murky now because the Justice Department's Criminal Divison Anti-Organized Crime Strike Forces continue to probe him and others of his old pack still in office.

As he always wished, Hoffa left the labor movement as a rich man. Thus he can afford his private bar association. They will come in mighty handy, for example, on May 15.

That day he goes before a Detroit grand jury. It is hearing the input of the regional strike force investigation into several locals there. And into two Hoffas.

The other is older brother Willy Hoffa who in his day was as freeswinging as Jimmy. The strike forces chiefs are interested in what happened to some $60,000 granted by the Teamsters national office between 1967 and 1973 to Local 614, (Pontiac) General Drivers, Warehousemen, Helpers and Gas Station Attendants. Jimmy was national Teamsters president for much of this time.

According to reliable sources, the money was authorized by the then Teamsters president to pay for organizing by a Local 614 business agent, namely Willy Hoffa. The same sources report they are eager to know what William Hoffa did for his salary, whom he organized and why so many know so little about Willy's activities.

This is but one of the strike forces' probes of teamsters, now underway in Chicago, throughout Ohio and several other states. But none at the moment have the drama of the brothers Hoffa.

These anti-crime strike forces are a hardy lot, led by tough young attorneys who care little that they nettle the U.S. attorneys in many districts. To the young prosecutors Hoffa and his old allies are unimpressive dinosaurian dynasts who've pushed people around for a long time.

This is the crowd the strike forces want to crack -- a still powerful crowd.

So Hoffa was subpoenaed last week. And the report is that others would like to put him under oath -- especially on what political contributions he aughorized in cash donations.

All this won't do much for Hoffa's chances to recapture the 2.4-million-member Brotherhood from the incumbent general president, Frank (Fitz) Fitzsimmons. Hoffa now is yo-yoing between the Washington D.C. Court of Appeals, the District Court and the Supreme Court. Early last month the Appeals Court ruled that the District bench should give Hoffa a hearing on his legal bid to set aside ex-President Nixon's conditional commutation of Jimmy's prison sentence. Mr. Nixon granted Hoffa clemency but directed that Jimmy must stay out of the labor movement, directly or indirectly, until March 6, 1980. Hoffa has protested, insinuating he'd have preferred to stay in the Lewisburg pen for another three or four years so he could be eligible to run for the presidency rather than be free in posh Bal Harrbour, Fla., Detroit and the Michigan lake district idling away his time as a realtor and lecturer.

Hoffa has a deadline. To take the teamsters he must be eligible to run by July 4, 1976. Quaint date. But it will take a lot longer than that to get out of the District courts.

Meanwhile Fitz appears to have it all sewn up. District by district the teamsters' units are pledging the ex-bus driver reelection support. The latest is Teamsters Western Sates Dairy Division which went gung-ho for Fitz and Secretary Treasurer Dusty Miller. This follows resolutions passed by the Western Conference of Teamsters Policy Committee and a series of joint councils.

There's national significance here beyond the saga of Fitz and Jimmy. Once Fitzsimmons's team is reelected; once Hoffa has only his pushups and money to console him, once the war with Cesar Chavez is out of the way (and it will be in some fashion in a year), a consolidated Teamsters union can become the Western world's most powerful single labor organization. Especially as the old guard passes -- and the strike forces are giving it a hand on its way out.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Ford Misled on Vietnam

By JACK ANDERSON
with
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The swift collapse of South Vietnam badly surprised President Ford who was misled, according to White House sources, by the national intelligence estimates.

These estimates are supposed to provide the President with the best possible analysis of what is likely to happen.

He was assured, for example, that the South Vietnamese army would be able to hold off the advancing Communists for several months. Even after the Saigon defenses began to crack, the national intelligence estimate predicted that Hanoi would negotiate with Saigon and form a coalition government.

The beleagured Central Intelligence Agency was the first, say our sources, to warn that a Communist victory was imminent. The CIA recommended that the United States use its leverage to persuade the Saigon leaders to form a "peace government," which could negotiate a truce.

This would have given the United States more time to arrange an orderly and dignified evacuation. The CIA was overruled, however, upon the advice of U.S. Ambassador Graham Martin who called upon President Nguyen Van Thieu instead to form a war cabinet supposedly to stiffen the resistence.

Although the Joint Chiefs correctly predicted more than two years ago that President Thieu would not survive and that the Communists would win the final struggle for Vietnam, the Pentagon badly misjudged the South Vietnamese army's ability to hold the line.

The Pentagon estimate was that the South Vietnamese would battle the Communists to a standstill along the approaches to Saigon. The only exception was the Air Force intelligence chief, Maj. Gen. George Keegan, who warned that the defenses would collapse.

It was the Pentagon's assessment that the South Vietnamese infantry divisions on the line were as good as any U.S. division. Then why did they buckle? From the secret cables, here is a thumbnail analysis:

President Thieu was shaken by the capture of Ban Me Thout in the Central Highlands last March. He concluded that his troops were spread too thin and ordered a strategic withdrawal.

But Thieu was indecisive. He would issue orders, then cancel them. He couldn't decide where to make a stand.

Finally, the commander of the Second Military Region, after a meeting with Thieu, returned to his men and announced: "We're pulling out tonight."

They not only abandoned their heavy equipment but left the First Military Region outflanked. What was supposed to be an orderly withdrawal, thereafter, turned into a pellmell rush for the coat. Panic spread, with every man for himself, until the hasty retreat became a total rout.

A QUESTION OF QUESTIONS

.. Times have changed, and company employment offices had best be aware of it. A management bulletin put out by the Water Quality Assn. contains a number of tips to enable personnel interviewers to avoid difficulties with the Equal Economic Opportunity Commission:

— Ask no questions about the job applicant's national origin. Restrict questions about membership in organizations to those dealing with professional societies or other work-related groups — and only when it is relevant to the job.

— Don't ask for the name of nearest kin. Instead, ask whom the applicant wishes notified in an emergency.

— Don't ask for a recommendation from the applicant's last employer. Ask for persons who will supply references.

— Restrict questions about the applicant's military career to work-related experience or training. Arrests are not convictions, so don't ask about them. It's even risky to ask about convictions, unless the applicant would be handling money or other valuables.

— Restrict any employment tests specifically to job requirements. Anything else may be discriminatory.

— Questions about height can be discriminatory (particularly against Hispanic Americans). Questions about weight can be asked only when it is relevant to the job and the standards are applied uniformly.

— Questions about car or home ownership, as measures of affluence, can be considered unfair to some minorities. Exception: It's safe to ask a salesman if he has a car.

— Don't ask single women if they are engaged.

Some of these restrictions seem eminently right and reasonable, others maybe a little less so. In any case, one is tempted to suggest an additional caution: Whatever questions you ask — smile.

MORE TURNED OUT TO BE LESS

"Sighted SUB, sank same" sums up the current recession as far as the nation's auto workers are concerned.

"Special unemployment benefit (SUB) funds at Chrysler and General Motors are expected to run dry this spring," ran the story the other day, "leaving more than 130,000 laid-off auto workers in bleak financial straits."

Clarification: Leaving them in the same financial straits as hundreds of thousands of laid-off nonauto workers who did not enjoy a year of SUB. That is, dependent upon state unemployment benefits alone.

It was nice while it lasted, and everyone admits that SUB was was never intended tocope with recession-depth cutbacks in auto production but rather to tide workers over temporary layoffs, such as at model-changing time.

And tide them over it did in grand style — at up 95 per cent of regular take-home pay, when state assistance was added.

It was hailed as a great victory for United Auto Workers bargainers when SUB was won from the industry a few years ago. Does any auto worker now maybe wish that the victory had been a little less complete — that perhaps SUB had been established at, say, 75 per cent of regular pay, or even as low as 50 per cent?

Half pay is better than no pay at all, and if SUB payments had been half the rate they were in 1974 there would now still be enough in the fund to last into 1976.

The auto workers didn't kill the goose that laid the golden egg. They just wore it out before its time.

BRANCHING OUT
Corps' new proposals ridiculous

If you are planning to dig a hole in your back yard to build a swimming pool, you'd better get at it within the next month. If you don't, you might run afoul of the Army Corps of Engineers.

The same thing applies if you're planning to excavate for a basement. Or, if you are a greenskeeper at a golf course, you have in mind adding to the frustration of golfers by building a new sand trap. In all such cases, there is a possibility that you may have to get a permit from the corps of engineers before you turn a shovelful of dirt.

All this stems from a recent decision by a federal court giving the engineers jurisdiction over dumping or dredging on "waters of the United States." The phrase formerly was "navigable" waters.. But the new ruling would greatly expand the corps' authority to include every lake, stream, stock pond, irrigation ditch and marsh in the nation.

The court ordered the engineers to come up with a definition of "waters of the United States." The engineers have proposed four, and it is the first of these four which could be interpreted to cover such odd areas as golf courses, swimming pools and basements. The key factor here, said a spokesman for the corps, is whether the area has ever been flooded by a navigable stream. If so, it lies on the flood plain and comes under corps jurisdiction.

Of much greater importance than the three examples we have cited is the fact that the regulations would require a farmer who wanted to plow a fertile piece of bottom land adjacent to a levee, or dredge an irrigtion ditch, or even enlarge a stock pond to get a federal permit to do so.

The Environmental Protection Agency, which would have the power to revoke any such permit issued by the engineers, favors the first and most sweeping of these proposals. The other three cover less territory, but all of them would greatly expand the engineers's authority.

We consider all four of them utterly ridiculous and we are confident we are far from being alone in opposing the adoption of any of them.

Already, we can hear the uproarious protests emanating from farmers — completely justified protests, we think — at having to go through all the endless red tape of getting a permit from the engineers before making a stock pond larger or dredging a half-filled-in irrigation ditch. It is their land, and it is none of the engineers', or the EPA's, business what they do with it.

The engineers have set June 6 as the deadline for comments on the proposals. We predict they'll get plenty of comments, all of them caustic.

CROP UNCERTAINTIES ARE RISING FROM THE FARM VETO

President Ford's veto of the emergency Farm Bill comes at a critical time in the agricultural production schedule of American farmers for 1975 crops of feed grains, soybeans and other foodstuffs. Those products are needed vitally by American consumers and world trading partners of the United States.

In vetoing the measure, the President followed the advice of Erl L. Butz, Agriculture secretary, who guessed thatthe provisions of the measure might cost the Treasury $1.8 billion. However, the President disregarded the urging of many influential representatives and senators within his own party, including the majority of the Kansas delegation, and many farm state Democrats and Republicans. It was, in short, a split decision, but probably one that will not be reversed by Congress.

The bill would have raised target prices, or guarantees, and loan supports for U.S. grain producers, who now are apparently at the mercy of a market marked in recent months by irrational price fluctuations., mostly on the down side. Whether farmers respond in anger by reducing spring plantings is a question that moves to the forefront. The consequences of that action on a widespread scale would be enormous, both at home and to our foreign markets.

The argument for increasing target prices and support levels was simple: If those provisions were valid when current farm legislation was passed several years ago — and apparently they were because they were included in the legislation wholeheartedly endorsed by Butz— then increases were in order now to take into account rapidly escalating costs of fuel, fertilizer, seed, labor an other farm production costs.

In the compromise version of legislation sent to the President's desk last week, target and loan prices were not out of line. They probably would have cost the Treasury, hence the taxpayers, nothing at all in food grain production cotton being the villain in the script offered by Butz. Many in agriculture fear that any lower level will be so far below the actual costs of food production that liquidation of many commercial family farms may now become a real prospect as it is currently in family farms producing beef cattle.

Additionally, farm grain prices have been declining at an alarming rate over the last several months. The administration's only attempt at a solution so far has been in trying to beef up farm exports under provisions of Public Law No. 480 to keep supplies from becoming burdensome. Some radical farm spokesmen have recommended that a better solution now would be "keeping tractors in the shed and breeding bulls penned up this year."

Butz also had contended that increasing supports would have created incentives for farmers to overproduce. Yet he and the administration have called for full production this year. It appears the Ford administration is bent on having it both ways: High production and undertain farm prices. But that, it is clear, is politics.

We hop time proves us wrong, but it now appears that grain and livestock, risky enterprises at best, are facing more hazards than ever because of the President's action.

DILEMNA IN FARM BILL

A veto of the farm bill would severely impair President Ford's election prospects across the nation's agricultural midsection, in the opinion of most rural politicians.

Mary Louise Smith, Republican national chairman, who is from Iowa, said the logic behind any veto decision would have to be explained in extraordinary lucid terms.

An earlier G.O.P. chairman, Sen. Bob Dole (R-Kan.) along with Sen. Milton R. Young (R-N.D.) pleaded with the President to accept the proposed rise in the minimum price guarantees and commodity loan provisions for this year's crops.

The compromise worked out by a conference committee already has cleared the Senate. The House is expected to approve it tomorrow by something less than the two-thirds that would be necessary later to override a veto. Ford hasn't said what he will do.

Earl L. Butz, agriculture secretary, is deadset against the bill, not because of its impact on consumer prices, but because he says a return to large scale government payments to farmers would have to be followed once again by undesirable production quotas and controls.

In days gone by, the congressional farm bloc could push through protective tariffs, rural electrification projects, soil conservation programs, and a complicated hybrid policy combining price supports, marketing controls, and surplus storage. But the numerical balance in Congress has swung to the metropolitan areas. Farm legislation must be tailored to the specifications of price conscious consumers.

Generally, the support levels in the pending bill are below current prices. Except for cotton and dairy products, food prices would not go up as a result of the provisions in the bill-unless, that is, farm prices for wheat, corn and other feed grains took a nose dive.

The presidential election implications of the farm bill issue seem clear. The Democratic vote in once solidly Republican farm states-the Dakotas and Iowa, for instance-has been increasing in recent elections. Farmers who aren't satisfied with what they see in their bank books are more inclined to vote Democratic.

BIGGEST COVER-UP

A farm industry spokesman has charged that the worst cover-up operation in Washington is not Watergate, but the untiring efforts of the Administration and the Congress to cover up with controls the inflation caused by irresponsible government spending policies.

In the words of the spokesman, "Without denying the political significance of the Watergate investigation, we must conclude that the effort to 'cover-up' inflation by means of economic controls is in most respects a far greater threat to the future well-being of this nation...." He added that only a few political appointees are involved in Watergate. Controls, on the other hand, "tempt citizens in every community across the land to hoard supplies, rustle cattle, keep two sets of books, pass money under the counter for special favors--and even cheat in such matters as the amount of fat left untrimmed on meat in grocery stores. Any government program which invites mass cheating is certain to be a corrupting influence....What is needed...is responsible government...."

XXX

Specific examples of ill-advised reform legislation are to be found among pension reform proposals pending in Congress. There is no question that employees must be protected in their pension rights. But any reform legislation that is passed must take into consideration the unique characteristics of particular industries.

For example, in retail stores payroll costs are a major part of total expense, taking about half of the margin, or difference, between the cost of the merchandise and the retail selling price. If employees were to gain vested or irrevocable pension rights after terms of employment that were too short, the cost to most retailers, who experience a high employee turnover, would be prohibitively high. Industry authorities suggest that minimum time of employment to become eligible for coverage in a retirement plan should be three years in order to avoid the expense of record keeping and reporting on a large group of employees who work only a short while and do not even acquire rights to retirement benefits. Any pension reform legislation should provide reasonable time for employers to build up adequate reserves to fund company pension programs. If the period of time allowed is too short, costs could be so great as to result in the curtailment or elimination of present plans and the abandonment of efforts to establish new ones -- particularly in retailing where employment costs are such a large factor. It is most important that any federal legislation that is enacted preempt state laws which set up standards for pension plans. Many businesses operate in several states, and it would be impossible to make any one pension plan conform to the varying requirements of different state legislation.

Consumers, retailers and employees alike have a great stake in letting their legislators know of their concern that pension reform legislation, if it is to be the law of the land, should be reasonable and workable and not weaken present retirement programs.

Inside Labor
By Victor Riesel

WASHINGTON — Apparently Watergate still is a growth industry -- what with Charles (Chuck) Colson now religiously writing his own memoirs for a change. Few were as close to Dick Nixon as Chuck. But, to steal a phrase from Jrrry Ford, that war is over and it's doubtful Colson would trample his grandmother, as he once said he would, for anybody.

But Chuck could do this nation a favor by disclosing the inside story of ex-teamsters iron man, bantam 62-year-old Jimmy Hoffa who now claims that Mr. Nixon threw him out of prison and on Chuck Colson's advice banned him from the labor movement until 1980.

Chunky Jimmy, who once had enough power in this land to neutralize an energy shortage, still hopes to recapture the Teamsters Brotherhood which is the mainspring of American industrialism. But his dreams must be murky now because the Justice Department's Criminal Divison Anti-Organized Crime Strike Forces continue to probe him and others of his old pack still in office.

As he always wished, Hoffa left the labor movement as a rich man. Thus he can afford his private bar association. They will come in mighty handy, for example, on May 15.

That day he goes before a Detroit grand jury. It is hearing the input of the regional strike force investigation into several locals there. And into two Hoffas.

The other is older brother Willy Hoffa who in his day was as freeswinging as Jimmy. The strike forces chiefs are interested in what happened to some $60,000 granted by the Teamsters national office between 1967 and 1973 to Local 614, (Pontiac) General Drivers, Warehousemen, Helpers and Gas Station Attendants. Jimmy was national Teamsters president for much of this time.

According to reliable sources, the money was authorized by the then Teamsters president to pay for organizing by a Local 614 business agent, namely Willy Hoffa. The same sources report they are eager to know what William Hoffa did for his salary, whom he organized and why so many know so little about Willy's activities.

This is but one of the strike forces' probes of teamsters, now underway in Chicago, throughout Ohio and several other states. But none at the moment have the drama of the brothers Hoffa.

These anti-crime strike forces are a hardy lot, led by tough young attorneys who care little that they nettle the U.S. attorneys in many districts. To the young prosecutors Hoffa and his old allies are unimpressive dinosaurian dynasts who've pushed people around for a long time.

This is the crowd the strike forces want to crack -- a still powerful crowd.

So Hoffa was subpoenaed last week. And the report is that others would like to put him under oath -- especially on what political contributions he aughorized in cash donations.

All this won't do much for Hoffa's chances to recapture the 2.4-million-member Brotherhood from the incumbent general president, Frank (Fitz) Fitzsimmons. Hoffa now is yo-yoing between the Washington D.C. Court of Appeals, the District Court and the Supreme Court. Early last month the Appeals Court ruled that the District bench should give Hoffa a hearing on his legal bid to set aside ex-President Nixon's conditional commutation of Jimmy's prison sentence. Mr. Nixon granted Hoffa clemency but directed that Jimmy must stay out of the labor movement, directly or indirectly, until March 6, 1980. Hoffa has protested, insinuating he'd have preferred to stay in the Lewisburg pen for another three or four years so he could be eligible to run for the presidency rather than be free in posh Bal Harrbour, Fla., Detroit and the Michigan lake district idling away his time as a realtor and lecturer.

Hoffa has a deadline. To take the teamsters he must be eligible to run by July 4, 1976. Quaint date. But it will take a lot longer than that to get out of the District courts.

Meanwhile Fitz appears to have it all sewn up. District by district the teamsters' units are pledging the ex-bus driver reelection support. The latest is Teamsters Western Sates Dairy Division which went gung-ho for Fitz and Secretary Treasurer Dusty Miller. This follows resolutions passed by the Western Conference of Teamsters Policy Committee and a series of joint councils.

There's national significance here beyond the saga of Fitz and Jimmy. Once Fitzsimmons's team is reelected; once Hoffa has only his pushups and money to console him, once the war with Cesar Chavez is out of the way (and it will be in some fashion in a year), a consolidated Teamsters union can become the Western world's most powerful single labor organization. Especially as the old guard passes -- and the strike forces are giving it a hand on its way out.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Ford Misled on Vietnam

By JACK ANDERSON
with
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The swift collapse of South Vietnam badly surprised President Ford who was misled, according to White House sources, by the national intelligence estimates.

These estimates are supposed to provide the President with the best possible analysis of what is likely to happen.

He was assured, for example, that the South Vietnamese army would be able to hold off the advancing Communists for several months. Even after the Saigon defenses began to crack, the national intelligence estimate predicted that Hanoi would negotiate with Saigon and form a coalition government.

The beleagured Central Intelligence Agency was the first, say our sources, to warn that a Communist victory was imminent. The CIA recommended that the United States use its leverage to persuade the Saigon leaders to form a "peace government," which could negotiate a truce.

This would have given the United States more time to arrange an orderly and dignified evacuation. The CIA was overruled, however, upon the advice of U.S. Ambassador Graham Martin who called upon President Nguyen Van Thieu instead to form a war cabinet supposedly to stiffen the resistence.

Although the Joint Chiefs correctly predicted more than two years ago that President Thieu would not survive and that the Communists would win the final struggle for Vietnam, the Pentagon badly misjudged the South Vietnamese army's ability to hold the line.

The Pentagon estimate was that the South Vietnamese would battle the Communists to a standstill along the approaches to Saigon. The only exception was the Air Force intelligence chief, Maj. Gen. George Keegan, who warned that the defenses would collapse.

It was the Pentagon's assessment that the South Vietnamese infantry divisions on the line were as good as any U.S. division. Then why did they buckle? From the secret cables, here is a thumbnail analysis:

President Thieu was shaken by the capture of Ban Me Thout in the Central Highlands last March. He concluded that his troops were spread too thin and ordered a strategic withdrawal.

But Thieu was indecisive. He would issue orders, then cancel them. He couldn't decide where to make a stand.

Finally, the commander of the Second Military Region, after a meeting with Thieu, returned to his men and announced: "We're pulling out tonight."

They not only abandoned their heavy equipment but left the First Military Region outflanked. What was supposed to be an orderly withdrawal, thereafter, turned into a pellmell rush for the coat. Panic spread, with every man for himself, until the hasty retreat became a total rout.

For Scott County

Flood funds recomended

BENTON — State Auditor George Lehr's office has recommended that Scott County be reimbursed by the federal government for $77,867.53 for flood damage repairs necessitated by the 1972 floods. The county had asked for $82,663.15.

Final decision as to how much the county will receive will be up to the Office of Emergency Preparedness. Scott County Clerk Bob Kielhofner said that if the funds are approved, it will probably be several months before any check is received.

Actual repair work was performed in 1972-73, Kielhofner said, on county roads outside the jurisdiction of special road districts.

He said the county has already been paid $20,000 of the money in a special program allowing an advance on the funds.

The biggest of the 49 projects involved repairs on five miles of road leading onto the Commerce levee. The project was approved for $30,330.96, but the county only claimed $16,221.66. In an audit conducted by Lehr's office, it was found that amounts spent were slightly less than claimed, so $70.99 of the county's claim was disallowed.

On the project, it was recommended that $16,150.67 be allowed.

In another major project -- repairs on Highway 163 about half a mile west of Benton which were affected by mudslides -- the original county estimate was approved for $3,068.87, but a later claim of $13,196.30 for actual costs was submitted. Lehr's office recommended that the entire claim be approved.

"We were lucky to get back what we did," Kielhofner said. "Usually in matters such as this, more is spent in some areas and less in others, but it tends to balance out."

Finalist can compete in fair rodeo

The finalists of this year's Bicycle Rodeo will be eligible to compete in the bicycle rodeo in September at the Mid-South Fair in Memphis, according to Sgt. Richard Couch of the Sikeston Police Department.

The rodeo, which features tests of bicycle safety and skill, is sponsored by the police, auxiliary police, Optimist Club, University of Missouri Extension Service and 4-H Club.

The rodeo will be at 10 a.m. June 7, in the Bank of Sikeston parking lot.

The number of finalists in the contest has not been decided, but contestants must be ages 8 to 14, Couch said.

Couch said he will tour the city's elementary schools during the last two weeks of May with a movie on bicycle safety, narrated by Bill Cosby.

Couch said any Scout group or civic group wanting a showing of the film can contact Couch at the police department.

Winter temperatures in Antarctica can drop as low as 127 degrees below zero Fahrenheit.

Mobile home park to be built

MALDEN — The City Council voted Monday night to lease 100 acres in the industrial park to Forebe Enterprises, a local firm, for the construction of a 100-unit mobile home park. The park will be fully developed by the firm, including sewage facilities, water lines, streets, curbs and guttering. The new park will meet all zoning regulations.

The council gave permission to Board of Public Works and street department employes to work with the civil defense in erecting two new weather warning sirens. The new sirens will be locate on Highway 25 North, near the IGA store and near the golf course in the air base area.

Permission was also granted the civil defense unit to clean out the basement of the city hall and to place a lock on the basement door. The basement is the headquarters for the city's emergency operations and contains radio and telephone equipment for use under emergency conditions.

A contract was awarded to Cooper Roofing Co. for the repair of the present community building roof at a cost of $360. The contract includes a six-year guarantee.

The council discussed the blacktopping project for this year and advised all citizens who want their streets blacktopped to draw up a petition and present it at the June 9 council meeting.

The council approved the repair of restroom roofs and a sprinkling system in Frisco Park, which was recently damaged by vandals.

The final bill for remodeling work at the city hall was approved for payment.

Commerce to drill again for water

COMMERCE — After one failure last year, another attempt is being made to build a working well in the public square to supply water for the city hall. The first attempt, in November, 1974, failed to find any water.

Mayor Ann Huck said a different spot is now being tried and a different firm, Brown's Well Drilling of Bell City, is handling the drilling. She said the change was made not because of dissatisfaction with the company that was doing the job, but because Brown is less expensive.

Drilling will probably start the last of this month or the first of June, Mrs. Huck said. The attempts so far have not cost the community any money since no water has been found.

The well has been planned for more than a year and a half.

Mrs. Huck also said town officials are encouraging citizens to clean up their vacant lots. She said action is being sought by request rather than through legal action.

For Scott County

Flood funds recomended

BENTON — State Auditor George Lehr's office has recommended that Scott County be reimbursed by the federal government for $77,867.53 for flood damage repairs necessitated by the 1972 floods. The county had asked for $82,663.15.

Final decision as to how much the county will receive will be up to the Office of Emergency Preparedness. Scott County Clerk Bob Kielhofner said that if the funds are approved, it will probably be several months before any check is received.

Actual repair work was performed in 1972-73, Kielhofner said, on county roads outside the jurisdiction of special road districts.

In an audit conducted by Lehr's office, it was found that amounts spent were slightly less than claimed, so $70.99 of the county's claim was disallowed.

On the project, it was recommended that $16,150.67 be allowed.

In another major project -- repairs on Highway 163 about half a mile west of Benton which were affected by mudslides -- the original county estimate was approved for $3,068.87, but a later claim of $13,196.30 for actual costs was submitted. The finalists of this year's Bicycle Rodeo will be eligible to compete in the bicycle rodeo in September at the Mid-South Fair in Memphis, according to Sgt. Richard Couch of the Sikeston Police Department.

The rodeo, which features tests of bicycle safety and skill, is sponsored by the police, auxiliary police, Optimist Club, University of Missouri Extension Service and 4-H Club.

The rodeo will be at 10 a.m. June 7, in the Bank of Sikeston parking lot.

The number of finalists in the contest has not been decided, but contestants must be ages 8 to 14, Couch said.

Couch said he will tour the city's elementary schools during the last two weeks of May with a movie on bicycle safety, narrated by Bill Cosby.

Couch said any Scout group or civic group wanting a showing of the film can contact Couch at the police department.

Mobile home park to be built

MALDEN — The City Council voted Monday night to lease 100 acres in the industrial park to Forebe Enterprises, a local firm, for the construction of a 100-unit mobile home park. The park will be fully developed by the firm, including sewage facilities, water lines, streets, curbs and guttering. The new park will meet all zoning regulations.

The council gave permission to Board of Public Works and street department employes to work with the civil defense in erecting two new weather warning sirens. The new sirens will be locate on Highway 25 North, near the IGA store and near the golf course in the air base area.

Permission was also granted the civil defense unit to clean out the basement of the city hall and to place a lock on the basement door. The basement is the headquarters for the city's emergency operations and contains radio and telephone equipment for use under emergency conditions.

A contract was awarded to Cooper Roofing Co. for the repair of the present community building roof at a cost of $360. The contract includes a six-year guarantee.

The council discussed the blacktopping project for this year and advised all citizens who want their streets blacktopped to draw up a petition and present it at the June 9 council meeting.

The council approved the repair of restroom roofs and a sprinkling system in Frisco Park, which was recently damaged by vandals.

The final bill for remodeling work at the city hall was approved for payment.

Commerce to drill again for water

COMMERCE — After one failure last year, another attempt is being made to build a working well in the public square to supply water for the city hall. The first attempt, in November, 1974, failed to find any water.

Mayor Ann Huck said a different spot is now being tried and a different firm, Brown's Well Drilling of Bell City, is handling the drilling. She said the change was made not because of dissatisfaction with the company that was doing the job, but because Brown is less expensive.

Drilling will probably start the last of this month or the first of June, Mrs. Huck said. The attempts so far have not cost the community any money since no water has been found.

The well has been planned for more than a year and a half.

Mrs. Huck also said town officials are encouraging citizens to clean up their vacant lots. She said action is being sought by request rather than through legal action.

Coping with diabetes

By JACKIE SCHOENEMAN
Women's Editor

Annabelle Meredith jabs a needle once a day into her stomach or thigh. She is not a "pothead" but a diabetic injecting insulin her body cannot produce.

Mrs. Meredith, 30, of Route Three, developed diabetes when she experienced excessive thirstiness, was physically exhausted and lost 20 pounds even though she ate continually. She was 21 when diabetes was diagnosed but does not suffer as many would think. Rather, she copes and leads a normal life.

To cope, she follows a diet of 1,800 calories consisting of specific breads, fruit, vegetables, meats, dairy and fats she can eat. She tries to eat three meals at regular times daily to avoid an insulation reaction of nervousness and shakiness caused by too little sugar in the blood and therefore, too much insulin. In other words, "You act like a drunk. If you can get body weight, insulin, exercise, type of food you eat plus the times you eat working together, there should be no problem."

However, her son, Marcus, 10, and Carl, her husband, do not miss the sweet desserts Mrs. Meredith cannot have. Rather she bakes her favorite, lemon meringue pie, using a sugar substitute.

She is quick to say her diet is not bland. "All of your spices have no calories or sugar count so there is no reason not to use them." When eating out, she usually orders a chef's salad and enjoys it.

Another myth is that diabetics feel tired throughout the day. Although Mrs. Meredith needs eight hours of sleep, last summer she worked part-time, kept house, gardened and canned. Any leftover energy, she uses teaching 14-20 kindergartners at the Little Vine Baptist Church near Matthews.

Exercise is also an important part of a controlled diabetic's regimen. Mrs. Meredith does not exercise routinely but does make an effort to walk and bicycle. The important thing "is to do the same amount every day."

For instance, if she knows she will be attending apicnic and playing badminton, she will pop an extra slice of bread or a banana in her mouth to maintain the sugar level in blood.

Mrs. Meredith must check her urine four times daily to detect if too much sugar in the blood spilled over into urine. A strip of litmus paper turns a color according to the sugar content in the sample.

In addition, she needs no push to read labels on foods carefully — especially when some of the dietetic foods she buys may contain sugar.

Despite her reliance on insulin, Mrs. Meredity feels free to travel and took a week's trip to Hawaii, carrying the insulin in an insulted purse-size container.

One thing diabetics need and are equipped with are clean feet. Because of sugar content in the bloodstream, circulation is poor and a small scratch may not heal, gangrene can set in and amputation or death may follow. To avoid this, Mrs. Meredith gave up her barefoot ways for a pair of clean and dry shoes.

She devours literature on diabetes because "if there's anything on research for a cure to make a diabetic's life easier, that's what I want for him." Him is her son who may develop the inherited disease.

Besides reading, she joined the Delta Community Branch of the SeMo Diabetes Association, formed March 1974. The organization helps about 25 families with their questions on how to handle diabetes. Mrs. Meredith need not drag her husband to meetings. He is chairman of the branch while she is a board member at the state level.

The organization is strictly functional, not social and members learn how to buy foods without sugar and listen to speakers talk on such things as doctor-patient relationships important to a diabetic in order to understand the intricacies of diabetes.

Currently, the Delta Branch wants to reach more diabetics. "Some people don't want other people to know they are diabetics or they don't like doctors telling them what to do to control diabetes and ignore their problem. A person can create more problems for himself with that kind of attitude.

People think you are a weird person because you have to stick yourself with aneedle every day. But other people have to do the same thing.

I don't feel restricrted (with diabetes). I was tickled to deaththat's all I had."

Annabelle Meredith

New fabrics

Acetate, the beauty fiber

By JEWEL GRADY

Acetate, a versatile fiber, is known as the beauty fiber. Countless American brides have worn lustrous acetate satin wedding dresses and no one could estimate how many millions of party frocks have been made of acetate taffeta.

The history of the acetate fiber as a separate fiber family began in 1952. The Federal Trade Commission issued a regulation that acetate be separated from the rayon family because it demonstrated different chemical and physical properties.

Acetate like other chemical fibers has great advantages in that every step of its creation from forest to fabric can be precisely controlled. Four manufacturers in the United States produce acetate fiber today. In addition to party clothes and wedding dresses, acetate is found in draperies, curtain, bedspreads, upholstery fabric, conntless yards of tricot knits for lingerie and backing for bonded fabric.

Outstanding properties of acetate are its excellent draping qualities, pleasing hand, brilliant colors and quick drying characteristics. It is less comfortable than cotton or rayon in summer because it absorbs little moisture. Acetate builds up static electricity charges.

Gentle care must be given when laundering acetate. Warm water with neutral soaps or detergents are suggested. If chlorine bleach is used it must be in low concentration and in cold water solutions. It should be rinsed thoroughly in lukewarm water and should not be twisted during wringing.

Most acetate fabrics should be ironed when nearly dry. Press on wrong side with a warm (rayon setting) iron. Acetate is heat sensitive andhas a low melting point. Dry cleaning is more satisfactory for many acetates. A stain removal caution is to avoid using fingernail polish remover, it will dissolve the fibers. Some perfumes may degrade it. Acetate is subject to gas fading. Some colors which contain blue will fade in acid vapors in the air. Perspiration can affect color. Avoid storing acetate garment with wool ones over a prolonged period of time as wool fabrics are slightly acid. The fiber is resistant to moth and mildew damage.

Although acetate is the second oldest manmade fiber it continues to be a contemporary fashion fiber with those fibers that are many years younger. Other fibers can and do achieve the rich, lustrous look of silk but none can accomplish it at a more moderate cost or in a greater texture variety.

Ann Landers
Wife calls impotency big problem

Dear Ann Landers: I could have written that letter signed, "Married In Name Only." I also read the tie-in letter signed "Most Happy Fella." He told about how his wife dealt with his impotency.

I envy that man. He is fortunate to have such an understanding partner.

However, having lived with the problem myself for two years (I'm in my early 40s, my husband is in his late 40s) I know that the frustration and guilt can be devastating.

It's a vicious circle, Ann. When a man becomes incapable of functioning sexually, the natural response of a wife who loves him is to feel rejected. The more rejected she feels, the more he is turned off by guilt and fear of failure.

My advice to wives with impotent husbands is keep trying and don't become discouraged. Every married woman is entitled to a satisfying sex life. Furthermore, the husband who isn't making the grade feels like less of a man--and that often leads to other problems.-- Battling Betty

Dear B.B.: Thanks for the report from the four-poster. Would it surprise you to know that male impotency is not a problem confined to middle-age? It's the No. 1 complaint heard in the health clinics on our country's campuses.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 17-year-old girl, an honor student with sense. I'm ashamed to be writing about this trifle but I need to know if I'm right or wrong.

There's this huge picture of my mother on the piano in our living room. It's 12 x 14 and you can't miss it. The picture was taken fifteen years ago, at least. Mom was 35, lighter then, her hair was a different color and she wasn't wearing glasses in those days. I also might add, the photographer must have been a genius. He made Mom look like Liv Ullman.

At least a dozen kids have asked, "Who's that?" When I say, "It's my mother--a few years ago," they always make some remark like--"She sure has changed." Or "What happened to her? She doesn't look like that NOW!" It's very embarrassing.

I don't want to hurt Mom's feelings but I really think that picture ought to go. For one thing I can't understand why a woman would want to have something around that emphasizes how much she has aged.

Should I keep my mouth shut or should I say something? If so, what?--Em Ef

Dear Em: Tell your mother the picture on the piano is out of date and she now has a more mature beauty you'd love to see captured on film. Urge her to replace the old picture with a new one. And by all means suggest that she use the same photographer--if he's still living.

Dear Ann Landers: Air-conditioning weather will be here before we know it. Help! Please!

Three women in this office are in the change of life. They are alternately freezing and roasting, turning the thermostats off and on. The ten males and six younger women hate it. What can be done? Upsy Downsy.

Dear U.P.: The menopausal ladies should wear light cotton dresses and keep sweaters handy. Orders from "on high" should be posted: "No one is permitted to touch the thermostats." The majority should decide on the desired temperature and that should settle it.

Don't flunk your chemistry test. Love is more than one set of glands calling to another. If you have trouble making a distinction you need Ann's booklet, "Love or Sex and How To Tell the Difference." Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request and 50 cents in coin to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120.

Household hints

Can you speak the language with the family butcher? Well, he may talk about a Delmonico, or a London Broil or a Boston Butt ... but the shrewd shopper basically needs to know only SEVEN cuts of meat:

Coping with diabetes

By JACKIE SCHOENEMAN
Women's Editor

Annabelle Meredith jabs a needle once a day into her stomach or thigh. She is not a "pothead" but a diabetic injecting insulin her body cannot produce.

Mrs. Meredith, 30, of Route Three, developed diabetes when she experienced excessive thirstiness, was physically exhausted and lost 20 pounds even though she ate continually. She was 21 when diabetes was diagnosed but does not suffer as many would think. Rather, she copes and leads a normal life.

To cope, she follows a diet of 1,800 calories consisting of specific breads, fruit, vegetables, meats, dairy and fats she can eat. She tries to eat three meals at regular times daily to avoid an insulation reaction of nervousness and shakiness caused by too little sugar in the blood and therefore, too much insulin. In other words, "You act like a drunk. If you can get body weight, insulin, exercise, type of food you eat plus the times you eat working together, there should be no problem."

However, her son, Marcus, 10, and Carl, her husband, do not miss the sweet desserts Mrs. Meredith cannot have. Rather she bakes her favorite, lemon meringue pie, using a sugar substitute.

She is quick to say her diet is not bland. "All of your spices have no calories or sugar count so there is no reason not to use them." When eating out, she usually orders a chef's salad and enjoys it.

Another myth is that diabetics feel tired throughout the day. Although Mrs. Meredith needs eight hours of sleep, last summer she worked part-time, kept house, gardened and canned. Any leftover energy, she uses teaching 14-20 kindergartners at the Little Vine Baptist Church near Matthews.

Exercise is also an important part of a controlled diabetic's regimen. Mrs. Meredith does not exercise routinely but does make an effort to walk and bicycle. The important thing "is to do the same amount every day."

For instance, if she knows she will be attending apicnic and playing badminton, she will pop an extra slice of bread or a banana in her mouth to maintain the sugar level in blood.

Mrs. Meredith must check her urine four times daily to detect if too much sugar in the blood spilled over into urine. A strip of litmus paper turns a color according to the sugar content in the sample.

In addition, she needs no push to read labels on foods carefully — especially when some of the dietetic foods she buys may contain sugar.

Despite her reliance on insulin, Mrs. Meredity feels free to travel and took a week's trip to Hawaii, carrying the insulin in an insulted purse-size container.

One thing diabetics need and are equipped with are clean feet. Because of sugar content in the bloodstream, circulation is poor and a small scratch may not heal, gangrene can set in and amputation or death may follow. To avoid this, Mrs. Meredith gave up her barefoot ways for a pair of clean and dry shoes.

She devours literature on diabetes because "if there's anything on research for a cure to make a diabetic's life easier, that's what I want for him." Him is her son who may develop the inherited disease.

Besides reading, she joined the Delta Community Branch of the SeMo Diabetes Association, formed March 1974. The organization helps about 25 families with their questions on how to handle diabetes. Mrs. Meredith need not drag her husband to meetings. He is chairman of the branch while she is a board member at the state level.

The organization is strictly functional, not social and members learn how to buy foods without sugar and listen to speakers talk on such things as doctor-patient relationships important to a diabetic in order to understand the intricacies of diabetes.

Currently, the Delta Branch wants to reach more diabetics. "Some people don't want other people to know they are diabetics or they don't like doctors telling them what to do to control diabetes and ignore their problem. A person can create more problems for himself with that kind of attitude.

People think you are a weird person because you have to stick yourself with aneedle every day. But other people have to do the same thing.

I don't feel restricrted (with diabetes). I was tickled to death that's all I had."

New fabrics

Acetate, the beauty fiber

By JEWEL GRADY

Acetate, a versatile fiber, is known as the beauty fiber. Countless American brides have worn lustrous acetate satin wedding dresses and no one could estimate how many millions of party frocks have been made of acetate taffeta.

The history of the acetate fiber as a separate fiber family began in 1952. The Federal Trade Commission issued a regulation that acetate be separated from the rayon family because it demonstrated different chemical and physical properties.

Acetate like other chemical fibers has great advantages in that every step of its creation from forest to fabric can be precisely controlled. Four manufacturers in the United States produce acetate fiber today. In addition to party clothes and wedding dresses, acetate is found in draperies, curtain, bedspreads, upholstery fabric, conntless yards of tricot knits for lingerie and backing for bonded fabric.

Outstanding properties of acetate are its excellent draping qualities, pleasing hand, brilliant colors and quick drying characteristics. It is less comfortable than cotton or rayon in summer because it absorbs little moisture. Acetate builds up static electricity charges.

Gentle care must be given when laundering acetate. Warm water with neutral soaps or detergents are suggested. If chlorine bleach is used it must be in low concentration and in cold water solutions. It should be rinsed thoroughly in lukewarm water and should not be twisted during wringing.

Most acetate fabrics should be ironed when nearly dry. Press on wrong side with a warm (rayon setting) iron. Acetate is heat sensitive andhas a low melting point. Dry cleaning is more satisfactory for many acetates. A stain removal caution is to avoid using fingernail polish remover, it will dissolve the fibers. Some perfumes may degrade it. Acetate is subject to gas fading. Some colors which contain blue will fade in acid vapors in the air. Perspiration can affect color. Avoid storing acetate garment with wool ones over a prolonged period of time as wool fabrics are slightly acid. The fiber is resistant to moth and mildew damage.

Although acetate is the second oldest manmade fiber it continues to be a contemporary fashion fiber with those fibers that are many years younger. Other fibers can and do achieve the rich, lustrous look of silk but none can accomplish it at a more moderate cost or in a greater texture variety.

Ann Landers
Wife calls impotency big problem

Dear Ann Landers: I could have written that letter signed, "Married In Name Only." I also read the tie-in letter signed "Most Happy Fella." He told about how his wife dealt with his impotency.

I envy that man. He is fortunate to have such an understanding partner.

However, having lived with the problem myself for two years (I'm in my early 40s, my husband is in his late 40s) I know that the frustration and guilt can be devastating.

It's a vicious circle, Ann. When a man becomes incapable of functioning sexually, the natural response of a wife who loves him is to feel rejected. The more rejected she feels, the more he is turned off by guilt and fear of failure.

My advice to wives with impotent husbands is keep trying and don't become discouraged. Every married woman is entitled to a satisfying sex life. Furthermore, the husband who isn't making the grade feels like less of a man--and that often leads to other problems.-- Battling Betty

Dear B.B.: Thanks for the report from the four-poster. Would it surprise you to know that male impotency is not a problem confined to middle-age? It's the No. 1 complaint heard in the health clinics on our country's campuses.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 17-year-old girl, an honor student with sense. I'm ashamed to be writing about this trifle but I need to know if I'm right or wrong.

There's this huge picture of my mother on the piano in our living room. It's 12 x 14 and you can't miss it. The picture was taken fifteen years ago, at least. Mom was 35, lighter then, her hair was a different color and she wasn't wearing glasses in those days. I also might add, the photographer must have been a genius. He made Mom look like Liv Ullman.

At least a dozen kids have asked, "Who's that?" When I say, "It's my mother--a few years ago," they always make some remark like--"She sure has changed." Or "What happened to her? She doesn't look like that NOW!" It's very embarrassing.

I don't want to hurt Mom's feelings but I really think that picture ought to go. For one thing I can't understand why a woman would want to have something around that emphasizes how much she has aged.

Should I keep my mouth shut or should I say something? If so, what?--Em Ef

Dear Em: Tell your mother the picture on the piano is out of date and she now has a more mature beauty you'd love to see captured on film. Urge her to replace the old picture with a new one. And by all means suggest that she use the same photographer--if he's still living.

Dear Ann Landers: Air-conditioning weather will be here before we know it. Help! Please!

Three women in this office are in the change of life. They are alternately freezing and roasting, turning the thermostats off and on. The ten males and six younger women hate it. What can be done? Upsy Downsy.

Dear U.P.: The menopausal ladies should wear light cotton dresses and keep sweaters handy. Orders from "on high" should be posted: "No one is permitted to touch the thermostats." The majority should decide on the desired temperature and that should settle it.

Don't flunk your chemistry test. Love is more than one set of glands calling to another. If you have trouble making a distinction you need Ann's booklet, "Love or Sex and How To Tell the Difference." Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request and 50 cents in coin to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120.

Caution urged by stock experts

By CROCKETT SCOTT

If the baby bull market is maturing, it sill is many months away from full bloom, say SEC-registered equity analysts in Memphis and St. Louis.

Yet one can get gored or stomped in both the present and the future by jumping in too vigorously on high-riding stocks, note the professionals.

Corrections along the way are patterns to be expected, they emphasize. So it sometimes is better to wait for a sell-off than to barge in "at the market" on equities which have had fast run-ups.

A number of the nationally recognized stock market advisory services also temper their counsel with some caution currently.

Standard & Poor's Outlook suggests that "further nearby gains appear likely,,' but notes that "unless buying interest broadens out, the advance may lose momentum, suggesting a potential for turbulence ahead."

United Business and Investment Report observes that "the economic bag is becoming filled with a mixed batch of indicators, consistent with a gradual halt in the downturn and an equally gradual path to recovery. But for all the negative near term implications of this pattern, the slowness of the business turnaround may be the strongest thing going for it.

"For, if the recovery were to take off like a bat, it probably would do so at the risk of generating another, possibly even more severe recession later on. There is still some danger that such a rapid recovery could develop, particularly if the government becomes overzealous in its spending. But for now, the indicators point to a gradual bottoming out and recovery."

Moody's Stock Survey reports that "first quarter earnings reports were not the major disaster that had been widely feared. Economic recovery later in the year could result in full-year earnings being better than now generally expected. (we estimate a 15 per cent decline). We believe that stock prices will advance further during the course of the year.

"Although it has been widely forecast almost from the beginning of the rally, the market has yet to pull back or even consolidate its gains. It will, though, and we think that investors should take advantage of any dip in prices to add to their equity holdings. At this juncture, stocks seem to have considerably more upside potential."

Drew Position concedes that "the intermediate rally that began last fall has been somewhat stronger than we anticipated. A combination of short covering by cornered bears and panic buying by investors who should have bought earlier and didn't is forcing prices higher than expected. None of this changes the fact that we have profound reservations about the long-term outlook. Do not add to your position now, it is far too late."

Florida Steel is rated only B-plus by Standard & Poor's, yet a number of SEC-registered equity analysts in the Southeast like the stock as a long-term speculation

Presently traded on the New York Stock Exchange at around 24, the stock sold as high as 34 during 1974, and a few years into the past topped out at 44.

Florida Steel's earnings have been impressive: moving from $2.61 per share in 1970 to $2.68 in 1971, $4.10 in 1972; backed off to $3.96 in 1973, then spurted to $7.19 in 1974. For the quarter ended the past Dec. 30 earnings were off slightly to $1.29 from $1.41.

Analysts note that the balance sheet is strong, the state of Florida is a boom area and that the stock is paying $1.50 per share dividend.

Price earnings ratio is very modest--under four.

United Business Reports has issued buy recommendations on the following pollution control equities: American Air Filter, Combustion Equipment, Peabody Galion, Research Cottrell and Wheelabrator Frye.

Bic Pen long has been a long-term speculative favorite of some St. Louis SEC-registered analysts; and the recent quarterly report for tghe period ending March 31 makes exceptionally good reading-sales $21,370,000 versus $16,389,000; net $2,206,000 (34 cents) vs. $1,341,000 (21 cents).

Housing aid is hiked

In far too many communities in Missouri and nationally, rising interest rates and building costs have priced middle-income families out of the housing market. The resulting drop in home sales is one of the primary causes of the construction industry's current 19.3 per cent unemployment rate.

In an attempt to stimulate recovery in the depressed housing industry, both the Senate and House have passed Emergency Housing bills with differences still to be worked out in conference. Designed to boost home construction and sales, the bill, as passed by the Senate, provides middle-income families with two options designed to help them meet the cost of buying a new home.

Under the Senate bill, a middle income family could either take advantage of a subsidy which would lower the effective interest rate to six per cent during the first three years of the mortgage or could receive a $1,000 cash grant to help on the down payment or closing costs.

To benefit from the program the income of the family and the price of the home must not exceed specified limits.

To provide temporary relief for unemployed or underemployed homeowners unable to meet their mortgage payments, the Department of Housing and Urban Development also would be authorized to make mortgage payment loans of up to $300 per month for up to three years. The loans would, of course, have to be repaid.

To qualify, the homeowner would have to be delinquent on at least two months mortgage payments and have received notification from the holder of the mortgage of intent to foreclose. If present trends continue, as many as 300,000 families nationwide could benefit from this provision.

Other provisions of the Senate passed bill include a requirement for the Department of Housing and Urban Development to set energy conservation standards for commercial and residential construction, extension of the home rehabilitation loan program and postponement until January 1, 1976, of the deadline for flood-prone communities to meet HUD standards under the flood insurance program.

Sponsors of the legislation believe some jobs would be created by the $700 million authorized to carry out the Emergency Housing Act. Since the housing would be financed by lending institutions, this would be ten times the number which could be created if the same amount of Federal money was allocated for direct funding of public employment or public works.

Caution urged by stock experts

By CROCKETT SCOTT

If the baby bull market is maturing, it sill is many months away from full bloom, say SEC-registered equity analysts in Memphis and St. Louis.

Yet one can get gored or stomped in both the present and the future by jumping in too vigorously on high-riding stocks, note the professionals.

Corrections along the way are patterns to be expected, they emphasize. So it sometimes is better to wait for a sell-off than to barge in "at the market" on equities which have had fast run-ups.

A number of the nationally recognized stock market advisory services also temper their counsel with some caution currently.

Standard & Poor's Outlook suggests that "further nearby gains appear likely,,' but notes that "unless buying interest broadens out, the advance may lose momentum, suggesting a potential for turbulence ahead."

United Business and Investment Report observes that "the economic bag is becoming filled with a mixed batch of indicators, consistent with a gradual halt in the downturn and an equally gradual path to recovery. But for all the negative near term implications of this pattern, the slowness of the business turnaround may be the strongest thing going for it.

"For, if the recovery were to take off like a bat, it probably would do so at the risk of generating another, possibly even more severe recession later on. There is still some danger that such a rapid recovery could develop, particularly if the government becomes overzealous in its spending. But for now, the indicators point to a gradual bottoming out and recovery."

Moody's Stock Survey reports that "first quarter earnings reports were not the major disaster that had been widely feared. Economic recovery later in the year could result in full-year earnings being better than now generally expected. (we estimate a 15 per cent decline). We believe that stock prices will advance further during the course of the year.

"Although it has been widely forecast almost from the beginning of the rally, the market has yet to pull back or even consolidate its gains. It will, though, and we think that investors should take advantage of any dip in prices to add to their equity holdings. At this juncture, stocks seem to have considerably more upside potential."

Drew Position concedes that "the intermediate rally that began last fall has been somewhat stronger than we anticipated. A combination of short covering by cornered bears and panic buying by investors who should have bought earlier and didn't is forcing prices higher than expected. None of this changes the fact that we have profound reservations about the long-term outlook. Do not add to your position now, it is far too late."

Florida Steel is rated only B-plus by Standard & Poor's, yet a number of SEC-registered equity analysts in the Southeast like the stock as a long-term speculation

Presently traded on the New York Stock Exchange at around 24, the stock sold as high as 34 during 1974, and a few years into the past topped out at 44.

Florida Steel's earnings have been impressive: moving from $2.61 per share in 1970 to $2.68 in 1971, $4.10 in 1972; backed off to $3.96 in 1973, then spurted to $7.19 in 1974. For the quarter ended the past Dec. 30 earnings were off slightly to $1.29 from $1.41.

Analysts note that the balance sheet is strong, the state of Florida is a boom area and that the stock is paying $1.50 per share dividend.

Price earnings ratio is very modest--under four.

United Business Reports has issued buy recommendations on the following pollution control equities: American Air Filter, Combustion Equipment, Peabody Galion, Research Cottrell and Wheelabrator Frye.

Bic Pen long has been a long-term speculative favorite of some St. Louis SEC-registered analysts; and the recent quarterly report for tghe period ending March 31 makes exceptionally good reading-sales $21,370,000 versus $16,389,000; net $2,206,000 (34 cents) vs. $1,341,000 (21 cents).

Housing aid is hiked

In far too many communities in Missouri and nationally, rising interest rates and building costs have priced middle-income families out of the housing market. The resulting drop in home sales is one of the primary causes of the construction industry's current 19.3 per cent unemployment rate.

In an attempt to stimulate recovery in the depressed housing industry, both the Senate and House have passed Emergency Housing bills with differences still to be worked out in conference. Designed to boost home construction and sales, the bill, as passed by the Senate, provides middle-income families with two options designed to help them meet the cost of buying a new home.

Under the Senate bill, a middle income family could either take advantage of a subsidy which would lower the effective interest rate to six per cent during the first three years of the mortgage or could receive a $1,000 cash grant to help on the down payment or closing costs.

To benefit from the program the income of the family and the price of the home must not exceed specified limits.

To provide temporary relief for unemployed or underemployed homeowners unable to meet their mortgage payments, the Department of Housing and Urban Development also would be authorized to make mortgage payment loans of up to $300 per month for up to three years. The loans would, of course, have to be repaid.

To qualify, the homeowner would have to be delinquent on at least two months mortgage payments and have received notification from the holder of the mortgage of intent to foreclose. If present trends continue, as many as 300,000 families nationwide could benefit from this provision.

Other provisions of the Senate passed bill include a requirement for the Department of Housing and Urban Development to set energy conservation standards for commercial and residential construction, extension of the home rehabilitation loan program and postponement until January 1, 1976, of the deadline for flood-prone communities to meet HUD standards under the flood insurance program.

What's the law?

The case of the 007 device

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Wilbur went on a trip, fell into a water-filled ditch and broke his ankle. And, if that wasn't revolting enough, the traveler's checks he took with him, advertised as emergency money, contained a sort of self-destruct mechanism. When wet, and Wilbur's had been thoroughly dunked, the word "VOIDED" appeared across their face

The result? Having paid for his return flight home with traveler's checks that suddenly declared themselves "VOIDED," Wilbur, broken ankle and all, was bounced from the airplane at a stopover with no cash. And, for several hours thereafter, he was forced to hobble for miles on a pair of crutches, back and forth to the airport, until he could get the matter straightened out.

A complete wreck by the time he entered his front door, Wilbur sued the company that had issued the traveler's checks for the excruciating pain and embarrassment he had been caused to suffer.

"While secret devices might be O.K. for a James Bond," he complained in court, "I'm just a simple sort of man. I should have been forewarned that the traveler's checks voided themselves when wet."

"It was a legitimate precaution against swindlers," was the defense. "When wet, traveler's checks are easy to alter. Because Wilbur fell into a water-filled ditch certainly wasn't our fault. It was a fluke, for which we obviously can't be held accountable."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold the company and its 007 device liable for Wilbur's pain and embarrassment?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that it was negligence for the company not to have forewarned Wilbur or anyone else that its traveler's checks could expire upon drowning. And, concluded the judge, Wilbur was entitled to recover damages for his pain and embarrassment that resulted from his not being able to use his traveler's checks, advertised as emergency money, when he needed them the most.

Missouri squirrel hunters open their season May 24, with a daily limit of six and possession limit of 12. The season is expected to be a good one because a good nut crop last year should have kept the animals in good shape through the winter and spring.

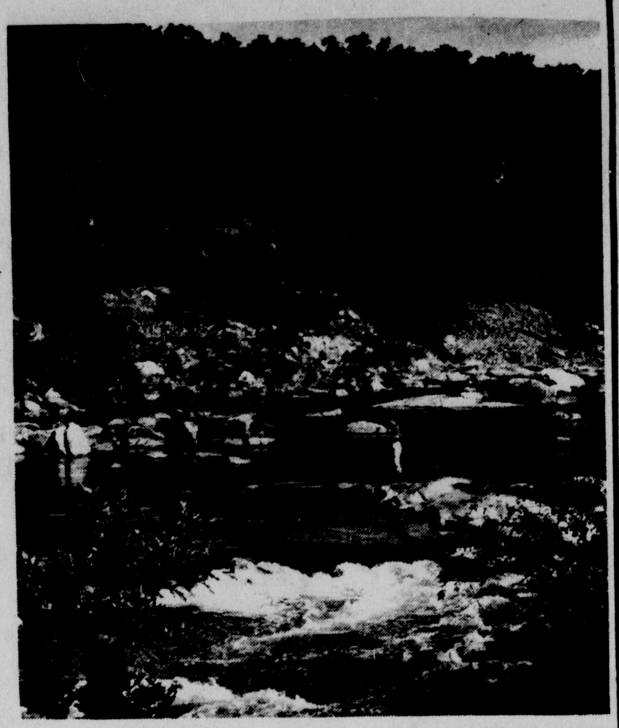
Tough bird

MONTGOMERY CITY — In Montgomery County, there's a question whether turkey hunters are carrying their guns for hunting ... or for self protection.

Floyd Ficken, Montgomery County agent, reports talking to a man with a cabin on Cuivre River who went out one morning and as he started back to the house, was confronted by a wild turkey gobbler who, in the manner of gobblers, puffed up, rattled its wings, muttered a gallinaceous threat or two and advanced on the man.

Ficken says the man backed up and actually fended the bird off with a stick without noticeably discouraging it. Finally, the harassed man got in his automobile and waited until the belligerent turkey wandered away.

"He told me, with a smile, that he was willing to share his property with wild creatures," Ficken says. "but he'd prefer it if the turkeys felt the same way."



Missouri's Ozark stream bass season will re-open May 24. There is a minimum length limit of 12 inches for all bass in Missouri streams. Daily limit is six, with possession limit of 12.

Monopoly lake drawdown

PUXICO-Monopoly Lake on Mingo National Wildlife Refuge will be drained this year according to refuge manager Gerry Clawson. In making this announcement, Clawson said, his purpose was to answer questions raised by fishermen and clear up any misunderstandings which might exist about the Mingo water management program.

The water program at Mingo is not new. Monopoly Lake has been drained periodically since the establishment of the refuge. During recent years it has occurred on a three-year rotational basis with Rockhouse-Cypress Marsh, the other large water area on Mingo. The drawdown went relatively unnoticed until 1969 when a major fish kill occurred. The results of this are well known to area inhabitants.

It should be pointed out the combination of circumstances which occurred in 1969 are not likely to recur. Ditch No. 5, the main drainage canal leading out of Monopoly Lake was cleaned out that year. When the dragline operator reached the main portion of the lake, drainage came quickly and a large number of fish were forced into the ditch in a short period of time. This occurred in late June and was immediately followed by a week of unseasonable hot weather. The rapid drainage caused high water turbidity and in combination with the hot weather resulted in a depletion of oxygen and the massive fish kill. No plans exist to clean out Ditch 5 again. Monopoly was drained in 1970 and Rockhouse from 1971 through 1974 without any major problems.

Monopoly Lake, as it now exists, is not a natural lake. Like Rockhouse Marsh, it is a large body of shallow water held back by earthen plugs in the ditches. Prior to the establishment of the refuge, both areas dried-up each summer.

The water management program is designed to do two things. Drying up the "Lake" allows moist soil plants or "weeds" to grow. When these plants mature in the fall, the area is gradually reflooded and the seeds made available to migrating ducks and geese. Thus one of the main objectives of the refuge, to provide food for migratory waterfowl, is accomplished. The second reason is to duplicate, as nearly as possible, natural conditions. Whereas, the swamp formerly dried up in late summer, it is now drained under controlled conditions. The drying-up allows cypress and Tupelo trees to reproduce, thus speeding up the recovery of the area as a natural southern hardwood swamp.

A side effect often overlooked is the positive effect of the drawdown on the fish population. The drawdown favors natural food production and actually increases the growth rate of the fish population when the area is flooded. The best fishing in a reservoir situation traditionally comes the second and third years following initial flooding. Compare this with a permanently flooded area where fishing success frequently tapers off after the third or fourth year and rough fish populations increase at the expense of game fish populations.

Clawson says, he does not anticipate a major fish kill on Monopoly this year. Special regulations do allow the salvage of rough fish and people are encouraged to take advantage of this situation. Specifically, non-game fish may be taken on Mingo for personal use by snaring, grabbing, snagging, crossbow, longbow, gigs, nets and seines during the period from March 15 through September 30 by any holder of a Missouri Sport Fishing license.

Although the drawdown was initiated last December, heavy rains have maintained the level near normal this spring. However, as spring rains diminish lake levels will decline and the Monopoly area should be dry some time in June or early July. On the other hand, Rockhouse marsh on the east side of the refuge near Highway 51 is full of water and will remain so all summer. Fishing here has been reported as fair to good in Rockhouse this spring.

Mingo National Wildlife Refuge is administered by the Fish & Wildlife Service, U.S. Department of the Interior.

LET'S TAKE A TRIP

It seems that the Cardinals don't have that many fans in Southeast Missouri interested in seeing them play....or this column is seldom read! At least that's the impression we've got after our recent appeal to our readers to express their views on a possible Southeast Missouri night at the ball park.

As of this writing...I've only received two letters on the subject.

But I haven't given up yet...come on now, drop me a post card with your thoughts on the subject or call us and leave your name.

MINOR LEAGUE REPORT

Gary Blaylock of Malden socked three home runs last week and collected 11 runs batted in to run his California class A league leading figures to six home runs and 23 RBI's for the Visalia, Calif., Mets.

The husky hard-hitting athlete has 22 hits in 66 times at bat for a .333 batting mark this season. He's scored eight runs and hit four doubles. The son of a former Cardinal star by the same name, Blaylock, missed most of last season due to an injury.

Fisk's Steve Coulson, playing with the West Haven Yanks in the Eastern class AA league, is hitting .250 on the season with 10 hits in 40 times at bat. He's scored four runs, homered once and driven in five runs.

Southeast Missouri's three minor league pitchers continued to improve upon their earned run marks.

Mark Littell of Gideon, playing his third season with the Omaha Royals in the class AAA American Association, claimed his first victory of the season last week and lowered his ERA to a 2.79.

The fireballing righthander has appeared in four games and shows a 1-3 season record with 29 innings of work. He has allowed 22 hits and 13 walks while fanning 24 batters. Littell also missed some of last season due to an injury.

Puxico's Galen McSpadden, a former Southeast Missouri State University standout, has seen limited action for the Reno, Nev., Padres of the California class A league. The hard throwing athlete has worked three innings, allowing three hits and three walks.

Randy Smith of Arbyrd, playing with the El Paso Angels in the Texas class AA league, is undefeated on the season in two games. The big lefthander has worked 25 innings, allowing 33 hits and eight walks while fanning 14. His ERA mark is 4.97.

The reports are a weekly exclusive furnished by Player Periscope of Navato, Calif., to the Daily Standard.

Missouri squirrel hunters open their season May 24, with a daily limit of six and possession limit of 12. The season is expected to be a good one because a good nut crop last year should have kept the animals in good shape through the winter and spring.

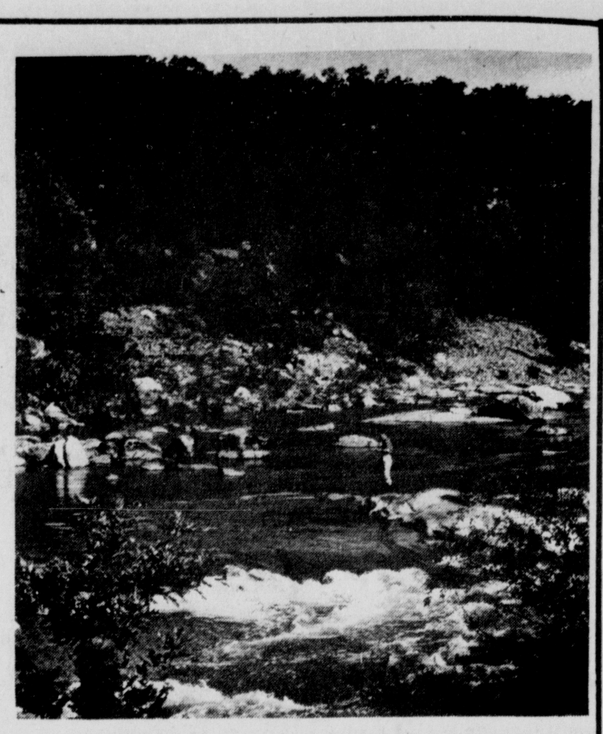
Tough bird

MONTGOMERY CITY — In Montgomery County, there's a question whether turkey hunters are carrying their guns for hunting ... or for self protection.

Floyd Ficken, Montgomery County agent, reports talking to a man with a cabin on Cuivre River who went out one morning and as he started back to the house, was confronted by a wild turkey gobbler who, in the manner of gobblers, puffed up, rattled its wings, muttered a gallinaceous threat or two and advanced on the man.

Ficken says the man backed up and actually fended the bird off with a stick without noticeably discouraging it. Finally, the harassed man got in his automobile and waited until the belligerent turkey wandered away.

"He told me, with a smile, that he was willing to share his property with wild creatures," Ficken says. "but he'd prefer it if the turkeys felt the same way."



Missouri's Ozark stream bass season will re-open May 24. There is a minimum length limit of 12 inches for all bass in Missouri streams. Daily limit is six, with possession limit of 12.

Cubs castoff clips Birds

ST. LOUIS (AP) —"Coming over here was renewed confidence, and tonight was something on top of that," stockily built right-hander Burt Hooton said.

The 25-year-old Hooton, who two weeks ago was cast off by the Chicago Cubs, for the most part reconstructed his own self-image by pitching a two-hitter Tuesday night in the uniform of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"As soon as I got here I had a reversal of my attitude," commented Hooton, who stopped the St. Louis Cardinals 5-0 while facing only 29 batters.

"I think it's a new environment, a new team, getting a chance to pitch regularly—being with a team that has confidence enough in me to send me out there every fourth day."

Until the outing, the blond Hooton was burdened with a 7.20 earned run average and a 0-3 record on the basis of three unspectacular games with the Cubs and two with the Dodgers.

But the onetime high Cub draft choice, a former University of Texas All-American, made amends with his eighth career shutout and first complete game in five starts.

Hooton, relying more than usual on fast balls, held the Cards hitless until Sizemore slammed his first delivery in the fourth inning off the left field wall.

Then the 6-foot-1 pitcher retired 15 straight batters until Melendez, who led off the ninth, grounded a single into left field.

"Red Adams (Dodger pitching coach) talked to me and got me back to the way I had been pitching," said Hooton, who in 1972 hurled a no-hitter and in 1973 won 14 games.

"He got me back to where I'm squaring off with home plate," he added. "He got me to slow down and got my arm working with my body."

Embellishing the triumph, the Dodgers' seventh in eight games, were Rick Auerbach's two-run single in the fourth off Cards starter Lynn McGlothen, 3-3, and Jim Wynn's two-run homer an inning later.

In the seventh, after Tommy Moore relieved McGlothen, Wynn followed a single by Hooton, a forceout, Dave Lopes' stolen base and a wild pitch with a single for his third run batted in.

Holtzman wins with one pitch

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Nolan Ryan pitched nine innings, Jim Bibby pitched five and Ken Holtzman faced only one batter but all came away with victories Tuesday night.

Ryan pitched six hitless innings and finished with his sixth career two-hitter in the California Angels' 3-0 victory over the New York Yankees. Bibby allowed singles to the first two batters and then knocked off the next 15 in the Texas Rangers' 5-0 triumph over the Milwaukee Brewers which was called in the fifth inning because of rain.

And Holtzman, who had a 1-4 record in eight starts despite a fine 2.35 earned run average, struck out Carl Yastrzemski to end a Boston rally in the fifth inning and was credited with the win in the Oakland A's 9-5 triumph over the Red Sox when Joe Rudi's tie-breaking home run in the bottom of the fifth made him the pitcher of record.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Baltimore Orioles edged the Chicago White Sox 3-2, the Kansas City Royals outlasted the Detroit Tigers 8-7 and the Cleveland Indians nipped the Minnesota Twins 3-2.

Ryan flirted with a record-tying fourth career no-hitter until Bobby Bonds broke the spell with a leadoff single in the seventh, the Yankees' only clean hit. Ryan, who joined Oakland's Vida Blue and Don Sutton of Los Angeles as the only seven-game winners in the majors, struck out seven and walked five.

Doc Medich matched scoreless innings with Ryan until he walked Bruce Bochte with two out in the sixth and Joe Lahoud and Dave Chalk followed with singles for a 1-0 lead. An inning later, Tom Egan's triple and singles by Morris Nettles and Bochte made it 3-0. Billy Smith lashed a two-run double in the eighth.

Cesar Tovar and Jim Spencer cracked first-inning home runs off Jim Slaton to back Bibby's pitching. A heavy thunderstorm hit Arlington Stadium with two out in the bottom of the fifth and the umpires called it after a one-hour, 31-minute wait.

Sosa gets starting call

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Relief specialist Elias Sosa, whose last start in 158 major league games was two years ago, has moved into the St. Louis Cardinals' rotation.

And the 6-foot-2 right-hander, Cards Manager Red Schoendienst said, will draw his first assignment next Monday night against the San Diego Padres.

Schoendienst's announcement followed the Cards' Tuesday optioning of right-hander John Denny, 2-2, to their Tulsa farm club of the American Association and purchase of right-handed reliever Ryan Kurosaki from Arkansas in the Texas League.

The 22-year-old Denny, who won his first two major league starts, had since failed in five successive outings and was knocked out in 3 1-3 innings Monday night by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"He's a good pitcher, and he's going to come back this year," Schoendienst maintained in respect to Denny, whose earned run average had increased to 4.33.

"I'm sure if our club was going better he'd be pitching better," Schoendienst added. "All he has to do when he gets down there is pitch the way he's capable."

Sosa, 25, boasts a 2.45 ERA after permitting only eight hits and one run in his last eight relief appearances, a streak compiled over 19 1-3 innings.

John Curtis, 1-1; Bob Gibson, 1-3; Bob Forsch, 3-3, and Lynn McGlothen, 3-3, remain the other starting pitchers in the Cards' rotation.

Loan rates still have hope

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz says the Ford administration may still raise loan rates for grains, although the President vetoed a farm bill containing such benefits for 1975.

After the House failed to override the veto Tuesday, Butz said administrative action on loan rates for grains was still being kept in mind.

"At the moment I don't contemplate any changes, but I stand ready to do so," Butz said. When Ford vetoed the bill May 1 he pledged some administrative action if farm prices fell precipitously.

Meanwhile, Chairman Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., of the Senate Agriculture Committee said Butz will be called to account quarterly for any adverse consequences over the veto of the farm bill.

The committee, beginning July 11, will seek "clear and factual evidence of the agricultural situation from the spokesman for this administration who must bear the greatest share of the responsibility for any consequences of this veto," Talmadge said, referring to Butz.

Talmadge said the secretary would be asked for detailed assessments of the supply, demand, materials, credit and distribution situations in the food marketing chain.

The 245-182 vote to override was 40 votes short of the two-thirds majority needed to override.

It was a clear victory for Ford, who said the bill would increase the 1976 deficit above his ceiling of $60 billion, and for Butz, who opposed the bill from its introduction four months ago.

Butz termed the vote the "first major test" in Congress on Ford's drive to hold down the federal deficit.

No-fault gets first approval

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri House gave first-round approval to a modified no-fault insurance bill Tuesday while also beginning debate on a proposed interest rate boost for small loan companies.

The interest bill would allow loans from $500 to $2,500 to carry 16.2 per cent interest rates per year. Supporters say the measure is needed to help financially troubled small loan companies, but opponents claim that more information is needed on the effect the boost from 8 to 10 per cent for such loans granted early this year has had on the companies.

Rep. Walter Meyer, D-Bellefontaine Neighbors, sponsor of the no-fault car insurance plan, said the bill if passed "would be the greatest step we have taken in automobile liability insurance."

The bill allows persons to file suits for medical expenses more than $500 or for permanent bodily injury or death.

Rep. Jack Buechner, R-Kirkwood, offered an amendment which was defeated which would have limited the court action to permanent injury or death.

The bill would require all motorists to carry liability insurance of $15,000 to $30,000 for personal injury and $10,000 for property damage.

It also would require a 15 per cent drop in insurance rates while allowing the state insurance director the authority to set future rates.

Injured persons would be allowed to collect up to $12,000 in medical payments and lost income.

Despite the tentative House approval, chances of passage of a no-fault bill still appear to be slim this session. A similar bill is bogged down in committee in the Senate, which last year killed a House-approved no-fault plan.

56 Signers – all Americans – all pioneers – all rebels in their day – all determined to free their fledging country from the tyranny of England's King and Parliament.

" - - - - - we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor." The closing words of the Declaration of Independence. How many of us would be so daring, so foolhardy today?

So, in these Bicentennial Years, let's all break out the flag. Fly it high. Fly it proudly. Fly it to show our respect for the memory of those great 56 men who dared to defy one of the strongest powers on earth so that America might be born and grow into the greatest and most generous country in the world.

We offer at cost as a Bicentennial Public Service a complete home flag kit – a 3 x 5-foot double-stitched heavy cotton flag – a 6-foot jointed 2-piece staff with top ornament – a heavy mounting bracket with three screws – all in a sturdy 2-piece storage carton with full color flag history folder. Order yours today by mail or by stopping in our office. Use coupon for mail orders.

1. In Memoriam

If you ever had a loved one who was with you every day
I'm sure you would miss them if they were called away

Memories of our loved one still cast their gentle glow.
To grace our days and light our paths where ever we may go.

The gifts our Father gives to us He sometimes takes away.
And we are left in loneliness
Just as we were one year ago today.
In loving memory of Mavis Riley

1. In Memoriam

If you ever had a loved one who was with you every day
I'm sure you would miss them if they were called away

Memories of our loved one still cast their gentle glow.
To grace our days and light our paths where ever we may go.

The gifts our Father gives to us
He sometimes takes away.
And we are left in loneliness
Just as we were one year ago today.
In loving memory of Mavis Riley

of rezoning of lots 7 and 8 in Moore's new addition from residential one to residential two. The council received a rezoning request from Norman Harper to permit construction of a multi-family apartment building on the property.

The council agreed to have four-way stop signs installed at the intersection of Main and Commercial streets, providing utility poles and wiring can be removed.

The council agreed to give five or six acres of land at the city-owned dump, located north of town adjoining the Big Lake area, to the State Conservation Commission for development of an acceptable public park area. The land will be donated after the county landfill begins operation and the present dump is not needed for city dumping.

Dave Brewer and Bill Chron of Charleston, members of the Mississippi County Recreational Association, presented the proposal from the Conservation Commission.

Downs was authorized to hire a year-round park and recreation director for a salary of $7,200 per year, which was included in this year's budget. Applications from three persons were reviewed by the council, and Downs was instructed to make the final selection of a director, who will be under his supervision. The director will be in charge of year-round recreation activities for all ages and will be responsible for care and maintenance of all city parks.

Insurance proposals for city employes were presented by representatives from three companies. The council accepted the maximum plan of Blue Cross and Blue Shield, presented by Ray J. Egner of Cape Girardeau, an enrollment representative.

The city will pay half the cost of the plan, which will cover a single employe for $26.84 per month and a family for $51.51 per month.

In other Indochina developments:

—Radio Phnom Penh, which has been silent on the subject of the Mayaguez, said Khmer Rouge soldiers "were astonished" when they captured the Cambodian capital and found they couldn't tell the boys from the girls "because of their strange clothes and haircuts." It lashed out at "fascist and corrupt" hair and clothing styles and said the revolutionary army "has erased these bad memories from our youths' minds."

—Associated Press correspondent George Esper reported from Saigon that the 10,000-ton North Vietnamese ship Song Huong arrived from Haiphong with a load of foodstuffs. He said it was welcomed by 300 civilians and 500 troops.

—Hanoi radio said President Ton Duc Thang and Paris peace negotiator Le Duc Tho were leading a 12-person North Vietnamese delegation to Saigon for the celebration beginning Thursday of the birthday of the late Ho Chi Minh. Messages from Thang and the North Vietnamese Defense Ministry both mentioned reunification of the two Vietnams, according to the broadcast.

First reports from the Thai Foreign Ministry said 800 Marines arrived before dawn at the U.S. Air Force's Utapao base on the south coast, but Kukrit later said Masters told him the final total was 1,100.

Neither the Thai government nor the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok was informed in advance of the Marines' arrival.

HOUSEBOATER GARDENS ON RAFT

SEATTLE (AP) — It all started when a decrepit raft banged against the Stephen Dunphy Houseboat on Lake Union.

Dunphy eyed it and decided to renovate the raft into a garden. Repairs cost $35 for 2 by 8 planks, boxes for vegetables, $35. A couple of old washtubs from a salvage bureau cost almost nothing.

Ten 35-pound bags of dirt, aided and abetted by six 40 pound bags of manure plus one bag of peat moss — cost — $35.

Once the garden was completed and seeds planted Dunphy grew carrots, lettuce, spinach, cucumbers, pole string beans. All were a success except the cucumbers which didn't come up to expectations.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

One of the surprises of the Revolution was the Americans' ability to unite politically at the outset of war with England though lacking a central government. As protest mounted against the Intolerable Acts of 1774, the first of many calls for an intercolonial congress came from a number of the colonies. On June 17, 1774, the Massachusetts House of Representatives proposed that a congress be held in Philadelphia in September. By Aug. 25, The World Almanac notes, all 13 colonies except Georgia had named delegates to what was to be the First Continental Congress. Copyright (c) 1975

The accident occurred when Russell Lawrence Ford, 17, apparently fell asleep at the wheel of a northbound car, which ran off the wrong side of the road and struck a dirt embankment.

Ford received moderate injuries and was taken to Ripley County Memorial Hospital at Doniphan.

of rezoning of lots 7 and 8 in Moore's new addition from residential one to residential two. The council received a rezoning request from Norman Harper to permit construction of a multi-family apartment building on the property.

The council agreed to have four-way stop signs installed at the intersection of Main and Commercial streets, providing utility poles and wiring can be removed.

The council agreed to give five or six acres of land at the city-owned dump, located north of town adjoining the Big Lake area, to the State Conservation Commission for development of an acceptable public park area. The land will be donated after the county landfill begins operation and the present dump is not needed for city dumping.

Dave Brewer and Bill Chron of Charleston, members of the Mississippi County Recreational Association, presented the proposal from the Conservation Commission.

Downs was authorized to hire a year-round park and recreation director for a salary of $7,200 per year, which was included in this year's budget. Applications from three persons were reviewed by the council, and Downs was instructed to make the final selection of a director, who will be under his supervision. The director will be in charge of year-round recreation activities for all ages and will be responsible for care and maintenance of all city parks.

Insurance proposals for city employes were presented by representatives from three companies. The council accepted the maximum plan of Blue Cross and Blue Shield, presented by Ray J. Egner of Cape Girardeau, an enrollment representative.

The city will pay half the cost of the plan, which will cover a single employe for $26.84 per month and a family for $51.51 per month.

Package liquor licenses were approved for Roamer Grocery and Bruenderman's Grocery on West Marshall Street by the liquor committee following the regular meeting.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

One of the surprises of the Revolution was the Americans' ability to unite politically at the outset of war with England though lacking a central government. As protest mounted against the Intolerable Acts of 1774, the first of many calls for an intercolonial congress came from a number of the colonies. On June 17, 1774, the Massachusetts House of Representatives proposed that a congress be held in Philadelphia in September. By Aug. 25, The World Almanac notes, all 13 colonies except Georgia had named delegates to what was to be the First Continental Congress. Copyright (c) 1975

ahead."

In other Indochina developments:

—Radio Pfnom Penh, which has been silent on the subject of the Mayaguez, said Khmer Rouge soldiers "were astonished" when they captured the Cambodian capital and found they couldn't tell the boys from the girls "because of their strange clothes and haircuts." It lashed out at "fascist and corrupt" hair and clothing styles and said the revolutionary army "has erased these bad memories from our youths' minds."

—Associated Press correspondent George Esper reported from Saigon that the 10,000-ton North Vietnamese ship Song Huong arrived from Haiphong with a load of foodstuffs. He said it was welcomed by 300 civilians and 500 troops.

—Hanoi radio said President Ton Duc Thang and Paris peace negotiator Le Duc Tho were leading a 12-person North Vietnamese delegation to Saigon for the celebration beginning Thursday of the birthday of the late Ho Chi Minh. Messages from Thang and the North Vietnamese Defense Ministry both mentioned reunification of the two Vietnams, according to the broadcast.

First reports from the Thai Foreign Ministry said 800 Marines arrived before dawn at the U.S. Air Force's Utapao base on the south coast, but Kukrit later said Masters told him the final total was 1,100.

Neither the Thai government nor the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok was informed in advance of the Marines' arrival.

HOUSEBOATER GARDENS ON RAFT

SEATTLE (AP) — It all started when a decrepit raft banged against the Stephen Dunphy Houseboat on Lake Union.

Dunphy eyed it and decided to renovate the raft into a garden. Repairs cost $35 for 2 by 8 planks, boxes for vegetables, $35. A couple of old washtubs from a salvage bureau cost almost nothing.

Ten 35-pound bags of dirt, aided and abetted by six 40 pound bags of manure plus one bag of peat moss — cost — $35.

Once the garden was completed and seeds planted Dunphy grew carrots, lettuce, spinach, cucumbers, pole string beans. All were a success except the cucumbers which didn't come up to expectations.

Sikes warns of schemes

By ALFRED C. SIKES
Director of Regulation and Licensing

JEFFERSON CITY — "Get rich quick" is an appealing slogan to the unemployed and those looking for ways to supplement their income. The current recession makes more people susceptible to such schemes that often operate only to benefit their promoters.

An advertisement may promise that you can earn money at home or in a short time. The jobs often sound easy and even fun. But consumers should be cautious of such promised earnings plans. Keep your eyes open for such schemes as described below:

Referral selling — Sometimes salesmen will try to persuade you to buy a product by offering you a cash refund or credit on the purchase price for every friend you recommend to them. This practice is called referral selling. Though it sounds legitimate, you actually may lose rather than profit on the deal. In most cases, you do not get a refund unless those you refer actually buy the product.

Products sold under a referral selling scheme are almost always overpriced to compensate for even the smallest refund that might have to be made up by the salesman. Frequently, the buyer is never reimbursed for his referrals and he ends up owing the full price for the product.

Distributorships — This is based on amulti-level distributorship in which a person is sold the "right" to distribute a product in a certain residential area. The big profits are designed to come from recruiting agents and dealers to sell the product from house to house. The distributor is promised a percentage of the money his dealers make n their sales.

The profits come not from selling the product, but in inducing others to put their life savings into a distributorship. Where a scheme flourishes, the supply of fresh victims is soon exhausted and the new investors are left with a faded dream and a garage full of merchandise.

Work-at-home — Consumers wanting to supplement their income, but unable to leave home, are sometimes victims of dishonest work-at-home schemes.

The promoter charges an initial fee for instructions, materials or machines needed and promises to purchase completed work from victims. But, in some instances, these items are never furnished and the promoter is never heard from again. Other times, completed work is rejected due to "poor quality of workmanship."

Business directories — Often professionals and businessmen are enticed to increase their business or service by placing their name in a directory or journal. In the end, the directory is cheaply produced and never reaches the consumer.

United States postal inspectors have found directory schemes prosper if one company in 20 can be tricked into thinking the solicitation is an invoice for services to which they had subscribed.

Though additional income may be badly needed now, avoid suspicious sounding promises. Check out the program before you commit yourslef.

1. Make sure you receive a contract or agreement signed by the business that clearly explains your rights and obligtions as well as the company's. Read it carefully and have it reviewed by an attorney.

2. Check the reputation of the business through the Better Business Bureau, local consumer agencies, the Chamber of Commerce, or by obtaining references who have dealt with the business and check with them.

3. If you are to sell a product, make sure it would be readily accepted in the community first and check to see if it couldbe bought less expensively from another source. And, if you are promised an exclusive sales territory, make sure the promise is carried through and no one else is sellingthe product in the same area.

State aid down

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story has been written by a student in the University of Missouri School of Journalism graduate reporting program in Washington, D.C.)

By TIM NEALE

WASHINGTON — Figures recently released by the Treasury Department reveal that although federal aid to state and local governments increased from $44 billion in fiscal 1973 to $46 billion in fiscal 1974, federal aid is decreasing as a percentage of state and local spending.

In 1973, federal aid constituted 32.8 per cent of state - local expenditures from their own funds. In 1974, however, only 30 per cent of what the states spent came from the federal government.

George Bell of the National Governors' Conference in Washington said federal aid is decreasing as a percentage of state spending because states are finding more money on their own. In 1974, he said the amount of money states took in by way of taxes on the sale of inflated items in stores increased by 8.9 per cent.

Also, he said a lot of the money appropriated for states by Congress was impounded by President Nixon in fiscal 1974, and thus was never received or spent by the states.

The amount of money Missouri received from the federal government in 1974 was more than $850 million, the 16th largest amount received by any one state.

The grant constituted a $5 million increase above the amount received in 1973 and a $350 million increase over the amount received four years ago.

This is not as great an increase in federal aid as most states received during the same four-year period.

The largest sum of money granted to Missouri came from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which doled out $312,081,012. Of that amount, $46 million came in the form of medical assistance and $28 million for elementary and secondary education activities, both average amounts compared with other states.

Missouri ranked 33rd, however, in assistance received for higher education activities during 1974.

The second largest federal grant came from the Department of Transportation, which allocated $116 million to Missouri. Of that amount $110 million came out of the highway trust fund for the construction of highways. That was the largest amount received for highway construction by any state in the Midwest.

Missouri received comparatively little money, however, for highway beautification and scenic enhancement.

From the Department of Agriculture Missouri received $112 million, the largest sums going for food stamps ($53 million) and the child nutrition program ($24 million).

Missouri also received $2,516,083 for agricultural experiment stations, which is more than any of the states in the region received. It was the only state in the area, however, that received no federal money for poultry and meat inspection.

Other funds received from federal agencies were $2,811,932 from the Commerce Department; $1,781 from the Department of Defense; $3,941,859 from the Department of the Interior; $21,269,522 from the Justice Department; and $63,049,380 from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The Defense Department gave Missouri $589,325 for flood control, which is more than any other state received.

The grants from HUD were largely for low-rent public housing ($24,054,012) and urban renewal ($18,085,264).

For law enforcement assistance Missouri received $21,269,522, the ninth largest amount received by any one state.

Spindle Side

Females in Anglo-Saxon clans were called the "spindle side" of the family as they did all the spinning of flax into cloth. Women were not fit to marry until they had spun their dowry of linens. In 1665, the colony of Massachusetts passed a decree requiring every family to weave three pounds of cloth a week, and set up quotas based on the number of women in a household. Unmarried women were appointed as "spinsters" to meet the quotas.

State aid down

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story has been written by a student in the University of Missouri School of Journalism graduate reporting program in Washington, D.C.)

By TIM NEALE

WASHINGTON — Figures recently released by the Treasury Department reveal that although federal aid to state and local governments increased from $44 billion in fiscal 1973 to $46 billion in fiscal 1974, federal aid is decreasing as a percentage of state and local spending.

In 1973, federal aid constituted 32.8 per cent of state - local expenditures from their own funds. In 1974, however, only 30 per cent of what the states spent came from the federal government.

George Bell of the National Governors' Conference in Washington said federal aid is decreasing as a percentage of state spending because states are finding more money on their own. In 1974, he said the amount of money states took in by way of taxes on the sale of inflated items in stores increased by 8.9 per cent.

Also, he said a lot of the money appropriated for states by Congress was impounded by President Nixon in fiscal 1974, and thus was never received or spent by the states.

The amount of money Missouri received from the federal government in 1974 was more than $850 million, the 16th largest amount received by any one state.

The grant constituted a $5 million increase above the amount received in 1973 and a $350 million increase over the amount received four years ago.

This is not as great an increase in federal aid as most states received during the same four-year period.

The largest sum of money granted to Missouri came from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which doled out $312,081,012. Of that amount, $46 million came in the form of medical assistance and $28 million for elementary and secondary education activities, both average amounts compared with other states.

Missouri ranked 33rd, however, in assistance received for higher education activities during 1974.

The second largest federal grant came from the Department of Transportation, which allocated $116 million to Missouri. Of that amount $110 million came out of the highway trust fund for the construction of highways. That was the largest amount received for highway construction by any state in the Midwest.

Missouri received comparatively little money, however, for highway beautification and scenic enhancement.

From the Department of Agriculture Missouri received $112 million, the largest sums going for food stamps ($53 million) and the child nutrition program ($24 million).

Missouri also received $2,516,083 for agricultural experiment stations, which is more than any of the states in the region received. It was the only state in the area, however, that received no federal money for poultry and meat inspection.

Other funds received from federal agencies were $2,811,932 from the Commerce Department; $1,781 from the Department of Defense; $3,941,859 from the Department of the Interior; $21,269,522 from the Justice Department; and $63,049,380 from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The Defense Department gave Missouri $589,325 for flood control, which is more than any other state received.

The grants from HUD were largely for low-rent public housing ($24,054,012) and urban renewal ($18,063,264).

For law enforcement assistance Missouri received $21,269,522, the ninth largest amount received by any one state.

Spindle Side

Females in Anglo-Saxon clans were called the "spindle side" of the family as they did all the spinning of flax into cloth. Women were not fit to marry until they had spun their dowry of linens. In 1665, the colony of Massachusetts passed a decree requiring every family to weave three pounds of cloth a week, and set up quotas based on the number of women in a household. Unmarried women were appointed as "spinsters" to meet the quotas.

LITTLE PROP PROBLEMS IN THE RING

NEW YORK (AP) — During the Metropolitan Opera Saturday afternoon broadcast of "Goetterdaemmerung," the golden ring fell off the finger of Birgit Nilsson, who was singing Bruennhilde, to the stage floor.

Later the soprano said that she was, after all, singing before she had lunch and her finger is thinner then.

During the first "Die Walkuere" of this season at the Met, Jess Thomas, as Siegfried, pulled the sword from the trunk of the tree and the blade flew from the hilt, only prevented from sailing into the orchestra pit by a scrim across the front of the stage.

And during the first "Siegfried" of the season, Thomas, in the title role, pulled the plug holding the stage anvil in one piece, gave it a mighty whack with the sword and the anvil stayed in one piece. Thomas hit it again and it appropriately fell asunder.

Spy unit secret

WASHINGTON (AP) — With $1.3 million from the federal government, the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit, a nationwide police organization virtually unknown to the public, has amassed a computerized intelligence file containing 18,905 names.

The intelligence unit, known as LEIU, and its data bank were established to exchange intelligence infrmation on organized crime. But some police officials say LEIU, which has more than 200 member intelligence agencies throughout the United States and Canada, has expanded its interests to include political dissenters and any citizen who arouses the curiosity of the police.

"Often just being controversial was enough to earn yourself a criminal intelligence file," said a Houston, Tex., police official. "It was obvious that municipal departments across the country were developing unbelievable files."

An insight into the operations of LEIU came when the Houston police department recently left the organization.

LEIU national chairman Ray Henry, a Long Beach, Calif., police intelligence officer, said the organization's purpose is to keep track of "traveling organized crime hoodlums." He added that it has "nothing to do with investigating political figures, churches, blacks, or anything of that type."

LEIU's computer data bank is known as the Interstate Organized Crime Index (IOCI) and is located in the intelligence division of the California Department of Justice.

Funds to operate the index came from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA), a federal agency which has distributed billions of dollars in crime fighting grants throughout the nation.

In 1973 an LEAA evaluation of the index said:

"This project established a national register containing 2,794 persons identified as organized crime rincipals and 18,905 names of all types including aliases, nicknames, associates and businesses."

The evaluators polled police departments connected to the system and reported user agencies wanted more names in IOCI.

The evaluators also cited complaints about limitations on the material included in IOCI. Some users indicated they wanted it to include data on "dissidents, radicals, revolutionaries and similar types."

It could not be determined whether those constraints on what could be included in the index were removed.

Farm coop explained at meeting

The Federal Land Bank, the largest farm cooperative in the world, was formed in 1916 to add stability to the country's agriculture, Hal Robertson, manager of the Sikeston Federal Land Bank Association told Kiwanians at Tuesday night's meeting in the El Capri Restaurant.

There are 12 Federal Land Banks in the United States, Robertson noted. The Sikeston association is part of the St. Louis bank, which serves Arkansas, Illinois and Missouri through 48 associations. The Sikeston association serves Scott, Mississippi, New Madrid, Stoddard and Cape Girardeau counties.

The average length of a loan through the association is eight years, although loans may be made for up to 35 years. The Federal Land Bank has now entered the rural housing loan business, which requires a borrower to have three acres and a modern house to obtain a loan.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

We, the people of Sikeston have responsibility as a citizen of the United States. Do you realize that the closing of the International Shoe Factory is just a beginning. Do you know that not just shoes are foreign made but also clothing, automobile, foodstuff, radios and television sets and parts? We, the people are guilty for putting the shoe factory out of business if you buy foreign made shoes, I know that it is hard to find shoes made here in the U.S. but I feel if you take the time and a little extra money and buy American made shoes you will have much better shoes and these people would still have a job. But if you do continue to buy these things that are foreign made what other factory will be going out of business? We, the women that do the shopping should take a few extra minutes to read labels, if you don't look closely you even get American brand canned meat packed and processed for these American companies, by their foreign subsidiaries. The stockholders get richer, while the working man in America gets poorer.

A lot of Americans say, well what can we do! Stop spending our American dollar on foreign made items. If this was your husband, wife, daughter, son, mother, or father that was losing a job you might be more thoughtful. Things always hurt more when it hits home for this is not only happening here but all over the United States. How many more people can we put on the unemployment bench by our own stupidity or just not caring. Do you care? If you do drop a line to our representative in Washington protesting the Give-A-Way of our livelihood to people who do not spend their wages here. Keep our world turning for the American People.

Spy unit secret

WASHINGTON (AP) — With $1.3 million from the federal government, the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit, a nationwide police organization virtually unknown to the public, has amassed a computerized intelligence file containing 18,905 names.

The intelligence unit, known as LEIU, and its data bank were established to exchange intelligence infrmation on organized crime. But some police officials say LEIU, which has more than 200 member intelligence agencies throughout the United States and Canada, has expanded its interests to include political dissenters and any citizen who arouses the curiosity of the police.

"Often just being controversial was enough to earn yourself a criminal intelligence file," said a Houston, Tex., police official. "It was obvious that municipal departments across the country were developing unbelievable files."

An insight into the operations of LEIU came when the Houston police department recently left the organization.

LEIU national chairman Ray Henry, a Long Beach, Calif., police intelligence officer, said the organization's purpose is to keep track of "traveling organized crime hoodlums." He added that it has "nothing to do with investigating political figures, churches, blacks, or anything of that type."

LEIU's computer data bank is known as the Interstate Organized Crime Index (IOCI) and is located in the intelligence division of the California Department of Justice.

Funds to operate the index came from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA), a federal agency which has distributed billions of dollars in crime fighting grants throughout the nation.

In 1973 an LEAA evaluation of the index said:

"This project established a national register containing 2,794 persons identified as organized crime rincipals and 18,905 names of all types including aliases, nicknames, associates and businesses."

The evaluators polled police departments connected to the system and reported user agencies wanted more names in IOCI.

The evaluators also cited complaints about limitations on the material included in IOCI. Some users indicated they wanted it to include data on "dissidents, radicals, revolutionaries and similar types."

It could not be determined whether those constraints on what could be included in the index were removed.

Farm coop explained at meeting

The Federal Land Bank, the largest farm cooperative in the world, was formed in 1916 to add stability to the country's agriculture, Hal Robertson, manager of the Sikeston Federal Land Bank Association told Kiwanians at Tuesday night's meeting in the El Capri Restaurant.

There are 12 Federal Land Banks in the United States, Robertson noted. The Sikeston association is part of the St. Louis bank, which serves Arkansas, Illinois and Missouri through 48 associations. The Sikeston association serves Scott, Mississippi, New Madrid, Stoddard and Cape Girardeau counties.

The average length of a loan through the association is eight years, although loans may be made for up to 35 years. The Federal Land Bank has now entered the rural housing loan business, which requires a borrower to have three acres and a modern house to obtain a loan.

Mike Parker was introduced as a new member.

"Aging" month proclaimed

Georgia Ventling, chairman of the Southwest Missouri Area Agency on Aging, and Jacques Lebel, director of the Missouri Office of Aging, were present as Gov. Christopher S. Bond signed the proclamation which officially declared May as Older Missourians Month. The proclamation called the wisdom and experience of our older population one of Missouri's greatest natural resources.

Emphasis on aging recognized during May in Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY — Older Missourians Month will be observed in May, during which senior citizens in all parts of the state will be asked to review their rights and obligations to society.

In connection with the activities of the month, senior citizens in every county will be reviewing a 1961 document called the Senior Citizens Charter, which was prepared by the first White House Conference on Aging 14 years ago.

"Because of the upcoming Bicentennial," says Jacques lebel, director of the Missouri Offie of Aging, "and because of the increased knowledge and sophistication we have gained about aging since 1961, we think this is a most appropriate time to revise the charter to fit the needs of the elderly of 1975."

Lebel said the charter will be used to determine priorities in programs for the elderly around the state.

"This has become increasingly important as more agencies and organizations around the state begin allocating time and money to work with the needs and concerns of the elderly," Lebel said.

Rights set forth by senior citizens in the 1961 charter include the right to be useful, obtain employment, freedom from want, a fair share of community resources, decent housing, moral and financial support of one's family, independent living, the right to live and die with dignity and the right of access to knowledge on how to improve the later years of life.

Obligations set forth by the charter include self preparation to remain active and useful, keeping healthy, seeking avenues of service, the obligation to make one's experience and knowledge available, being adaptable to change brought by added years and maintaining relations with family, neighbors and friends.

Hiatal hernia causes problems

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — This fall I was often very tired. After a doctor's tests and X rays I was told that I have a hiatal hernia that was bleeding. Now I am taking iron tablets and Maalox. My question is, does that correct itself? How serious is it?

DEAR READER — A hiatal hernia is a common condition where a portion of the stomach slides through the normal or enlarged hole in the diaphragm into the chest.

Fortunately, many middle-aged people who have this condition have no symptoms at all, but others do. A common associated problem is reflux of acid digestive juice out of the stomach into the lower esophagus. The acid digestive juice causes burning and pain, often called heartburn.

The irritation that occurs may lead to an ulcer in the lower esophagus or in some cases induce bleeding.

The Maalox you are taking is to neutralize the acid digestive juice to help protect your lower esophagus. You will need to do a lot more than that. The management at home of a hiatal hernia is a big factor in whether it causes future complications, including lower esophagus ulcers or bleeding.

I can't review all the management in this space, but if you want more information write to me in care of this newspaper and ask for The Health Letter on hiatal hernia (number 4-8). Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents for mailing and costs.

If you follow a proper diet — small meals — and take the steps to prevent reflux of acid material into the lower esophagus the irritation that caused the bleeding should correct itself or heal. The iron is to help you restore the iron you lost from the bleeding.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I want to ask you a question about syphilis. If a person has had it and was treated for it 25 years ago, is additional treatment required? Will it ever return after one is treated? Is the cure a sure thing or will it come back?

I live in fear and haven't been able to talk to anyone about this.

DEAR READER — A surprisingly large number of untreated cases of syphilis undergo what amounts to a spontaneous cure. I have cited in the past the study begun at the University Clinic of Oslo, Sweden at the turn of the century. In 1100 patients followed over 50 years, two-thirds went through the early infectious stages then had no further damage from the disease for the rest of their lives.

Since you were treated 25 years ago, it is likely that you received a good course of treatment with penicillin. The results here are much better than for earlier treatments before the days of penicillin.

There are a few cases in which the course of treatment really didn't eliminate all the tiny spots of infection in the body. But they are indeed rare after a complete treatment course.

If you are that worried about it, I think you should go see your doctor and let him examine you. Through tests and the examination he will be able to tell you for certain if you are one of those exceptionally rare individuals who need any further treatment. Incidentally, in any case you would long ago have ceased to be able to transmit the disease even if you had never been treated at all.

In 1100 patients followed over 50 years, two-thirds went through the early infectious stages then had no further damage from the disease for the rest of their lives.

Since you were treated 25 years ago, it is likely that you received a good course of treatment with penicillin. The results here are much better than for earlier treatments before the days of penicillin.

There are a few cases in which the course of treatment really didn't eliminate all the tiny spots of infection in the body. But they are indeed rare after a complete treatment course.

If you are that worried about it, I think you should go see your doctor and let him examine you. Through tests and the examination he will be able to tell you for certain if you are one of those exceptionally rare individuals who need any further treatment. Incidentally, in any case you would long ago have ceased to be able to transmit the disease even if you had never been treated at all.

Cooking Up

By CHERIE BLANTON

I have been cooking up a storm lately, trying out new recipes to give readers one that I know are sure to be good. I'll say one thing, you sure have to try out a lot to end up with a few that I feel can earn my stamp of approval.

MACAROON SQUARES

½ cup margarine, melted
2 cups graham cracker crumbs
2 Tbsp. sugar
2 cups flaked cocoanut
1 (14-ounce) can condensed milk
1 cup chopped pecans
1 square semisweet chocolate, melted
2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
1 cup powdered sugar
Few drops of water

Combine margarine, crumbs and sugar. Pat into a 12x8-inch baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes.

Combine coconut, milk and nuts; spread gently over first mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes or until lightly brown and firm to touch. Combine chocolate with powdered sugar and add a few drops of water to this mixture to get the sugar to melt in with the chocolate for a spreadable sauce. Spread this over baked mixture, cool and cut into squares.

MAYONNAISE BISCUITS

1 cup of self-rising flour
One-third cup milk
2 Tbsp. real mayonnaise

Mix all together, pat out and make about six to eight biscuits from the dough. Put in a greased baking tin and bake at 425 degrees 15 minutes or until done.

This is my own and it sure is hard to try and measure out a recipe. You just throw a pinch of this or that in but Charles said I should try because he thinks it is so good. I do order my blue cheese from a dairy farm in Wisconsin in four-pound wheels and it is far superior to that you buy in wedges at grocery stores. This may contribute to the flavor of this dressing.

BLUE CHEESE DRESSING

Mix together:
1 cup blue cheese
1 cup buttermilk
Two-thirds cup Miracle Whip
2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
¼ tsp. fresh ground pepper
1 Tbsp. lemon juice
¼ tsp. dry mustard
3 Tbsp. sugar
1¼ tsp. salt
½ tsp. garlic salt
One-third cup Mazola oil

Let sit in icebox at least two days before serving over salad greens.

SWEET SOUR CHICKEN

This is so easy you will never believe it! Bake uncovered at 350 degrees for one and one-half hours. Charles' suggestion is to skin the chicken before eating it to retain the sauce's flavor.

Mix the ingredients below and pour over 2, -2½ or 3-pound fryers that you have cut up and skinned and put into a baking dish. (don't stack the chicken.)

1 bottle of Wishbone Russian salad dressing (8 ounces)
1 envelope of dry onion soup mix
1 small jar of apricot preserves

Baste chicken at intervals. Spoon extra sauce over a side dish of rice.

Cigarette scorches teak dining table

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — A cigarette accidentally dropped on our teak dining table. Fortunately it was discovered before a hole was burned but a small brown scorch mark does remain. How should I remove this scorch mark? — JANE.

DEAR JANE — Sometimes slight burn marks can be removed from furniture by just rubbing with polish ordinarily used. I have had some success rubbing on petroleum jelly, letting it stand for several hours and then rubbing it off well. This was on a table with a shellac finish. If the top of your table has a varnish or shellac finish daub a cloth dampened with spirits of camphor on it. Let dry and then polish. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns the waste when aerosol cans stop working before they are half empty. We are warned of the danger involved with exploding cans if we puncture them. There is no way to use the remaining product. With the many rumors concerning the potentially harmful results from contents of such cans I am trying to use up those I have and not purchase things in spray form any more. — C.N.

DEAR READERS — I never cease to be amazed. You always come up with clever uses for anything and everything. By making something out of most anything you are all helping the ecology problem — and in such pleasant ways. Consequently I knew you would have some ideas for Mrs. C.B.S. who wanted to know how she could use an accumulation of plastic rollers from adding machine tapes.

A.C.T. wrote that they make neat rollers for curling one's hair. They are about the same size and shape as the beauty shops use. Bobby pins will secure them.

Mrs. L.S. had her husband unhook the wire from the tops of wire coat hangers, put seven of these rolls across the straight wire at the bottom and then bend the hanger top back together again. You then have excellent pants or slacks hangers as the rollers prevent a crease. She also suggested some of these be strung on a ribbon to make a toy for a baby that could be easily washed when soiled.

Mickey R. wrote that such rollers make good handles for packages tied with stout twine. Slip the twine through the tubing (use either one or two rollers) and allow enough play between the handle and the package and tie twine accordingly.

Linda says she places a few on end and glues them together with that white all-purpose glue to make a nice pen or pencil holder.

Mrs. R.S. uses these adding machine tape spools as ornaments in her macrame work and also in other decorative projects. They can be strung on cord and can be painted any desired color.

Mrs. J.P. suggests wrapping odd lengths of elastic, lace, ricrac, seam binding, twill tape or pieces of ribbon around such spools, tape the ends to avoid creases or tangles.

Space does not allow us to continue with the simply super idea one reader sent for making a clown but watch for it very soon. Congratulations and thanks to all of you. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — Do tell Mrs. P.T. she can clean her alabaster by using either talcum powder or corn starch. The decorator who told me this said, as you did, not to put the item in water. That might cause it to "melt." Use a soft brush to clean in the crevices. — SANDRA.

DEAR POLLY — I find that furniture polish sold in bottles goes further than that in aerosol cans. I also have read questions concerning the adverse effects of propellants. I use a soft cloth to apply the polish. Since furniture does not require polish each time one dusts I have a way to make my polish go a long distance. After dusting I shake the cloth into my outdoor trash receptacle and then store the cloth in a wide-mouthed glass jar in a closet. The polish permeates the cloth and is good for a number of dustings. Placing the cloth in a sealed container avoids an odor in the closet and, more importantly, the possibility of spontaneous combustion. I do not have to use water, detergent and electricity to wash the cloth. I simply toss it out when I feel its usefulness has ended and then I start with another rag. I keep one in a container upstairs and another downstairs. — JEAN F.

DEAR POLLY — When you have emptied a plastic bottle of dishwashing detergent fill it with water and put it in the car. There is enough detergent left to make soapy water that is very handy for washing dirty hands when out on the road.

Also, outdated credit cards make fine identification plates for luggage, notebooks or key chains. Cut out only your name and address and attach to the label with a good coating of household cement or punch a hole in it for a chain to go through. — MRS.L.W.

DEAR MRS. L.W. — Yours is indeed a good idea for using old credit cards except for the part about using on a key chain. I, too, had my name and address on my key chain until my car was stolen and a detective told me that was not a smart thing to do. The car thief had my name and address (along with my key) so burglarizing my house would be a cinch. The locks had to be changed. Also do not save whole old credit cards. Cut them up and throw them away. — POLLY.

DEAR MRS. L.W. — Yours is indeed a good idea for using old credit cards except for the part about using on a key chain. I, too, had my name and address on my key chain until my car was stolen and a detective told me that was not a smart thing to do. The car thief had my name and address (along with my key) so burglarizing my house would be a cinch. The locks had to be changed. Also do not save whole old credit cards. Cut them up and throw them away. — POLLY.

Today is Wednesday, May 14, the 134th day of 1975. There are 231 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1787, a convention met in Philadelphia to draw up the U.S. Constitution.

On this date —

In 1643, Louis XIV became King of France.

In 1804, Meriwether Lewis and William Clark set out from St. Louis, Mo., on their expedition to the Pacific Coast.

In 1907, Anna Jarvis arranged for a special church service in Philadelphia to honor mothers — an idea that spread and became Mother's Day.

In 1940, German bombers razed much of the Dutch city of Rotterdam in World War II.

In 1942, also in World War II, the U.S. Congress established the WAACs — the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps.

Thought for today: There is no education like adversity — Benjamin Disraeli, British Prime Minister, 1804-1881.

In 1948, Britain ended its rule in Palestine, and the independent state of Israel was proclaimed.

Ten years ago: A little corner of an English meadowside at Runnymede — where the idea of constitutional government first started — was dedicated in memory of the late President John Kennedy.

Five years ago: Henry Ford announced that he had turned down a Soviet proposal that the Ford Motor Co. build a truck plant in the Soviet Union.

One year ago: Queen Elizabeth II nominated the Archbishop of York, Dr. Donald Coggan, to succeed the retiring Michael Ramsey as Archbishop of Canterbury and head of the Church of England.

Today's birthday: Opera singer Patrice Munsel is 50.
